INDICT 74 IN FAKE LOTTERY

STORY ON PAGE 3

FINNS WANT WAR, REDS SAY

Soviets Outline List Of 'Threats' to Peace

MOSCOW, Nov. 3 (AP)—A note of alarm was injected into Russian-Finnish negotiations today by Pravda, organ of the Communist party, on the heels of indications that the two nations—while not entirely in agreement—at least had a working basis for reaching a solution of their problems.

Pravda declared that Finland's Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko had "directly threatened" the Soviet Union and that his remarks of Wednesday night "cannot be appraised otherwise than as an appeal for war with the U. S. S. R."

(Erkko asserted that Finland was ready to make arrangements for improving Leningrad's defensive positions and increasing the safety of the Gulf of Finland, but that "any guardianship which a foreign power might receive over Finnish territory must be regarded" as endangering Finland's neutrality.)

LIKENED TO POLAND

Pravda intimated that Finland, as well as the Scandinavian nations—particularly Sweden—were backed in their opposition to Russian concessions in the Baltic area by other powers.

It emphasized that in the pre-World War days, when Finland was part of Russia and the Russians controlled the area, there were no expressions of fear from Scandinavia.

Pravda said Erkko's position was "precisely like that of former Polish Foreign Minister Beck. It is known that he, too, made provocative speeches before the Polish-German War, and the result was that he provoked war with Germany."

The article dealing with concessions which Russia has asked of her little Baltic neighbor came on the day a Finnish delegation was expected to start its final discussions at the Kremlin.

CAUSES ALARM

Foreign circles had interpreted Erkko's speech Wednesday night as conciliatory in tone and foresaw an early settlement of the Russian requests, but the Pravda article used the strongest language yet employed publicly on the four-week negotiations.

Citing the fact that Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania already had signed mutual assistance pacts with Russia, Pravda said:

"Attempts to deny the mutual advantages of these agreements for all their signatories are made by their common enemies interested in fomenting war not only

ROOSEVELT HOPES TO SIGN NEUTRALITY LAW TOMORROW

By EDWARD LOCKETT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (INS)—President Roosevelt today said he hoped to sign several proclamations putting the new neutrality law—now nearing final action in Congress—into effect by tomorrow.

The President, at his press conference, expressed belief that the new neutrality measure—which repeals the arms embargo and sets up strict cash and carry provisions for exports of arms to Europe's warring nations—"restored the historic position of neutrality of the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt, in commenting on House action yesterday in putting virtually final touches on the neutrality bill, authorized this direct quotation:

"I am very glad that the bill has restored the historic position of neutrality of the United States."

READY TO ENFORCE LAW

As House and Senate conferees met on Capitol Hill to iron out minor differences between the two branches of the neutrality bill, the President revealed he planned conferences with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Assitant Secretary of State A. A. Berle.

At the conferences, he asserted, proclamations putting the new neutrality law into effect would be drawn up. His plan to sign the bill some time tomorrow indicated that he expected Congress to put the finishing touches to the measure today and have it on his desk by tonight or early tomorrow at the latest.

The President declared he did not believe that poor manners should beget poor manners in con-

63d Day

Behind the Front—Today, as the European war entered its third month, France and Britain looked gleefully towards the loosing of a great supply of airplanes and other equipment the moment President Roosevelt puts his signature to the revised neutrality legislation.

And Britain, it became evident at once, is ready to meet all the requirements of the "cash-and-carry" provisions of the prospective American law. In spite of the sub menace, her vast merchant fleet is ready to start a well-convoyed ferry system across the Atlantic.

German reaction to Washington developments, of course, was just opposite to that of the allies. Intensification of submarine activities over the transatlantic sea paths was expected to be the immediate result.

Official German quarters would not comment on America's change in her neutrality policy, but the restraint which the Reich press has hitherto maintained with respect to Mr. Roosevelt was abandoned. The President was accused of following the paths to war taken by Woodrow Wilson.

Allied quarters hailed, as a stabilizing influence in the Mediterranean bound to weaken what may be left of the Rome-Berlin Axis, the exchange of friendly notes between Rome and Athens.

On the Land—The situation on the Western Front remained in its usual quiet state today, despite the fact that the French declared that a German plane had been downed by British aircraft yesterday. Actual land maneuvers were described in the communiques from Berlin and Paris. Said the Germans: "There was feeble activity on the front." Said the French: "All was quiet."

In the Air, on the Sea—Possibility was seen today that the American freighter City of Flint might be plowing her way into a trap of British warships at the tip or Norway as the craft neared the North Sea toward a German port in command of a Nazi crew. Washington, meanwhile, received a report that the ship might be freed by Germany—if it reaches that country—after removal of her oil cargo. Beyond an aerial skirmish over France yesterday between German and British planes, activity in the air remained dull, due mostly to adverse weather conditions.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Nov. 3, 1914 (AP)—British and French bombard outer forts of the Dardanelles. German cruiser Yorck sunk by mine. German cruisers bombard Yarmouth, Eng. Russians enter Asiatic Turkey; seize Bayazid.

BRITISH WARSHIPS SIGHT, TRAIL FLINT

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—The British Admiralty tersely disclosed today that its warships were within sight of the American freighter City of Flint, now slowly making her way in charge of a German prize crew to a German port.

In what some observers interpreted as an indication the British would seek to avoid entanglement in the controversy over the ship's seizure by keeping "hands off," the admiralty announcement said it was possible for the captured steamer to stay inside Scandinavian territorial waters until reaching the Baltic.

A communique said:

"The Admiralty announced that the steamship City of Flint has been sighted by our light forces proceeding to the southward inside Norwegian territorial waters.

"It is possible for the City of Flint to remain inside Norwegian and Swedish territorial waters until she enters the Baltic."

The admiralty gave no hint whether the British ships would attempt to seize the City of Flint before she reached a German port in possession of her German captors.

(At Bergen, Norway, where the City of Flint passed at 9:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m., EST), several British warships were observed, apparently keeping watch as the German prize crew sailed the ship southward toward Germany. Observers there said it was possible that the British men-of-war would try to seize her after she leave Haugesund, where she was expected about ½ a. m. (11 a. m., EST). From Haugesund, about 75 miles below Bergen, she would cut into open sea across the entrance to Bukken Fjord.

(Below Stavanger, still further south, it was said, she may leave territorial waters to avoid Jaederens Reef, below the mouth of the Fjord.)

Hub Men Among 74 Indicted in Lottery

By THOMAS F. PHELAN

Seventy-four indictments, including six that named Greater Boston defendants and 19 that named other New England men, were returned by the federal grand jury here today, in the government's sweeping investigation of an alleged fake $20,000,000 lottery.

The huge fraud charged in the indictments was allegedly operated in part under false representation that it was for the benefit of Will Rogers Memorial Hospital.

First arrests reported today were those of Roland Blair of Chapman st., Quincy, and Armand Lizotte of Putnam, Ct.

Blair, who is married and the father of two children, was taken into custody by Deputy U. S. Marshals Michael H. Barry and Harold R. Sullivan.

They brought him to the Federal building for arraignment before a United States commissioner.

WOMEN ARE NAMED

Of the 74 indictments returned, two were against corporations, the other 72 against individuals.

Three of those indicted are women.

The Greater Boston defendants include:

Among other New England defendants indicted were listed:

Zip!--On Go Pants!

New Device Speeds Dressing

CHICAGO, Nov. 3 (AP)—Auburn Taylor has notified the National Inventors' Congress that it's no longer necessary for men to stoop over to pull on their pants.

From his home in Charleston, W. Va., he has dispatched plans and specifications for the Taylor valet chamber, or fireman's friend.

It shoots your pants on in a flash. An accessory also helps you with your shoes and socks, slipping them on or off with scarcely the requirement of a downward glance.

Taylor's brainchild is among the winter's crop of bright ideas made public by the inventors' congress today.

Mother, Baby Safe in Far North Rescue

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Nov. 3 (AP)—A young mother and her 19-day-old baby who spent three below-zero nights in an Alaska wilderness were safe at the town of McGrath today as rescuers sought to bring out by dog teams the other two victims of the forced airplane landing.

A special ski-equipped plane piloted by Nate Browne landed on the snow a half mile from the marooned group yesterday and flew Mrs. Christian Beckman, 26, and her baby daughter to McGrath, in west-central Alaska.

The plane carrying the mother and baby, with Pilot Jimmy Dodson and Ole Blenheim, another passenger, was forced down Monday by a snowstorm. Mercy Pollot Kenneth Neese, directed to the scene by radio, dropped milk and other food, a sleeping bag, diapers and nipples to the party from his plane.

Neither Mrs. Beckman nor the infant suffered any ill effects from the frosty interruption of their flight home to Ophir from the Fairbanks Hospital. The mother said the diapers met as great an emergency as did the food.

Each of the nights grew colder, Mrs. Beckman said, until the third night it reached 10 degrees below zero.

18 Are Driven Out In Brockton Fire

BROCKTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Fire of undetermined origin drove 18 persons, including 11 children, from a two and a half story tenement building at 589 North Montello street early today.

John Mooney, who lived on the second floor, was treated at Brockton Hospital for smoke inhalation. Damage was estimated unofficially at more than $5000.

FAKE LOTTERY—In Boston's Federal building (l. to r.), John J. Breslin, New England postal inspector; Jackson J. Holtz, assistant U. S. attorney, and Walter A. Boyle, postoffice inspector, look over 74 indictments brought against operators of a nation-wide fake lottery. Six Greater Boston and 18 other New Englanders are named in the indictments.

Cafe License Suspended for 3-Day Period

The Old Fashioned Cafe on Cambridge st., West End, will not be allowed to sell liquor next Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, under ruling of the Boston Licensing Board, it was announced today.

The decision followed a hearing before the board last week during which Mrs. Isabel Dalton Sargent, 33, of Queensbury st., Back Bay nurse, alleged that her leg had been broken in the cafe when a waitress pulled her from her chair while she was drinking and pushed her along the floor till she fell.

Mrs. Margaret Russo of Division st., Chelsea, the waitress, denied the charge.

Notice of the ruling was sent to Capt. William Donovan of the West End police station, who had complained that police got no co-operation in investigating the nurse episode.

Inasmuch as on Tuesday, election day, all drinking places will be closed during polling hours, the suspension is for a total of two and a fraction days.

WOMAN IDENTIFIES YOUTHS HELD AS BANDIT SUSPECTS

Two South Boston youths who police say admitted they "blew" their money on "wine, women and song" were dramatically identified in a Boston police lineup today by a middle-aged mother and her pretty daughter, victims of a gun-point bank holdup.

Mrs. Josephine Dlugokecki, of Dorchester ave., South Boston, employed in the Andrew Sq. Co-operative Bank, walked into the darkened lineup room, so obviously terror stricken a detective supported her arm and another carried a chair for her.

She sat before the brilliantly lighted lineup and in a breaking voice that was barely audible, picked out Frank Malcwiecz, 26, of Bowen st., and Robert Kane, 20, of Bolton st., as the pair who held up the bank last week.

She was followed by her pretty daughter, Mary, who picked out the same pair, and told how they had walked past the bank before the holdup, then entered, and how one said to her:

"All right, blondie, where's the dough?"

Then, the slim blonde girl continued, she and her mother were tied up and her father, the only other person in the bank, was left free because he could not walk.

Chester Dlugokecki, the father, came last, supported again by two detectives. He pointed to Malcwiecz and Kane with his cane and said:

"Those are the men."

Kane, slouched before the detectives earlier, had insisted he was the "brains" of the two, and that he carried the gun in the holdups. Mary and her father both said Malcwiecz held the gun.

The pair were captured outside the Meeting House Hill Bank near Uphams Corner through the quick action of Patrolman Thomas F. Farrell, who was on a day off, clad in old pants and a sweater, and who saw the two loitering near the bank entrance.

When they were arrested Kane had a .45-calibre revolver and a box of bullets, while Malcwiecz had a .32-calibre revolver with a sawed-off barrel and a box of bullets for that, police said. Both carried cigarettes containing marijuana, police added.

At that time, according to police, Kane freely admitted they were going to rob the bank for a haul they hoped would run up to $16,000.

"The Andrew sq. job was the only one we did," Kane said. "I had a gun and I bought one for $16 for Malcwiecz. We walked to the bank and I held the gun on the people and then tied them and he took the dough. I planned the job.

"We went home to my house and split the $610 we got and went in to Boston. I blew mine on liquor. We moved to Lowell."

Malcwiecz told substantially the same story, except that his $305 he "just blew." He said he came back to Boston yesterday to see his girl—and because of that was trapped.

Rich Marine Weds, But No Honeymoon

LONELY BRIDE

When duty calls a Marine must answer, even if he has just been married.

That's why Private Roland "Larry" Gardner, U. S. M. C., heir to a $250,000 oil and mining fortune was on sentry go at the Boston Navy Yard a few hours after he had been wed in a little Malden rectory.

He and his bride, the former Aline Harris of Spring st., Stoneham, who was 18 yesterday, will wait for their honeymoon until "Larry" gets a four-day furlough next week.

The young Marine became one of the richest buck privates in Uncle Sam's crack forces a year ago when, with two other brothers, he inherited the $750,000 fortune of his father, whom he had not seen for 15 years.

MARRIED IN MALDEN

The young couple was wed at the Malden home of Rev. C. S. MacKay, pastor of the Stoneham Episcopal Church, at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. But because the young marine had to be back on duty at Charlestown Navy Yard at 10 o'clock last night, the reception at the bride's home was necessarily short.

Their real honeymoon, however, begins Sunday night, when Larry goes off duty for four full days. And both are looking forward to next May, when Larry's enlistment expires and he'll be free to set up an automobile business with the share of his inheritance he has already received. The bulk of the fortune will be turned over to him two years from now, when he is 25.

So, except for the restrictions placed on him by duty, Larry says he's satisfied with life. He has a comfortable fortune and a pretty, young bride which makes a happy climax to a long struggle to earn his living after being separated from the rest of his family when only six years old.

HAS TRIED EVERYTHING

Since then, Larry has tried his hand at almost everything.

A year ago he received word that his father had died in Chicago, leaving the fortune, earned by developing western oil and mining properties, to himself and two older brothers.

Also wed was first-class seaman Anthony Walter Kelczewski and Agnes Carole Pusz, despite the fact that they face a separation of 18 months when Kelczewski sails away for the Antarctic with the Byrd expedition Nov. 15 on the Bear of Oakland.

Kelczewski, 24, is lightweight wrestling champion of the Atlantic fleet. His home is in Schenectady, N. Y. His bride, a former nurse, is employed as a cashier in Passaic, N. J. They met two years ago and became engaged a year ago.

Boston Evening American Photos

LONG WAIT—Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Kelczowski, above, will be separated for a full year shortly, even though they wed only last night. Bridegroom will sail with Byrd on Antarctic expedition. Bride is former Agnes Carole Pusz of Passaic, N. J.

STRIKE IN 3 HOTELS

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 3 (INS)—Three downtown hotels today were strikebound as emloyes demanded union agreements similar to others won in the city. The hote's affected are the Plankinton, Kilbourn, and the Wisconsin.

BYRD SHIPS TO SAIL SOUTH THIS MONTH

New tentative sailing dates of the two ships of their fleet were announced today by officials of the government's expedition to the Antarctic.

The Interior Department's motorship North Star, which was to have sailed tomorrow, will leave Nov. 9, according to present plans. The second ship, Admiral Byrd's old barkentine Bear of Oakland, is scheduled to sail a week later.

The delays, it was reported, are due to "general preparations" and not to the troubles of the huge snow cruiser, which was undergoing repairs at Akron, O.

"We will wait, within reason for the cruiser," said Roger Hawthorne, assistant field representative of the U. S. Antarctic Service.

GETS POLICE ESCORT

Arriving at Akron, en route from Chicago to Boston, the cruiser was given a police escort across Akron to the Goodyear Zeppelin dock, where two immense tires were to be mounted and repairs made.

Great crowds have gathered along the route of the Brobdinagian vehicle, cutting down speed to about six miles an hour and necessitating a large police detail.

Meanwhile, plans were under way in Boston to give the cruiser an unimpeded right of way from the state line to Boston. If ice develops along the roads, the State police and Public Works engineers will order the roads heavily sanded. The big ark is built for icy wastes, but not wet roads.

MAY BE LEFT BEHIND

There was said to be little prospect that the big ice ship would be loaded on the smaller Bear of Oakland once the North Star leaves.

Lieut. Commdr. R. H. Cruzen of the Bear has received 10 applications from Canadian and American seamen for the job of boatswain on the old square-rigger, which will use sail as well as power.

Dever Approves Cigarette Tax Vote

In a surprise announcement which split the ranks of state officials, Attorney General Paul A. Dever approved the movement afoot for a referendum on the cigarette tax.

In sharp contrast with the views of Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long and Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, Dever said:

"The contention made by those who disagree with my ruling is not novel. It was the contention of the Tories who opposed the American revolution. They, too, believed that the people should have no voice in matters of taxation. I prefer not to be a present day Tory."

Broken Headlamp Hit-Run Death Clew

SOUTHBORO, Nov. 3—From the wreckage strewn about the Boston-Worcester turnpike near Lovers' Lane, state police today sought clews to the identity of the hit-run car which crushed to death a Harvard graduate student cycling to New Jersey for a gay holiday week-end.

Richard G. Wheeler, 22, of New York city, was killed as a speeding car crashed into his bicycle and carried it 91 feet. Curtis L. Clay, 22, a Harvard junior, was cycling 50 yards ahead and narrowly missed a similar fate.

Fragments of glass from a broken head light, containing tell-tale numbers, were found near the scene and are expected to lead police to the car and driver responsible.

Wheeler, scion of a wealthy family, was a well-known mountain climber and had scaled lofty peaks in Europe as well as in this country.

Clay told police he and Wheeler had left Cambridge to pedal to Princeton, N. J., planning to arrive in time for the Harvard-Princeton game there tomorrow.

Hearing a crash behind him, Clay told police, he braked his bicycle and rode back about 75 yards through the dusk and found Wheeler's body crumpled by the side of the road.

As he was riding back, he said, a black sedan rushed by him into the darkness. He did not see the registration of the car.

With the help of a passing motorist, Arthur W. Nichols, of Alvardo st., Worcester, Wheeler was taken unconscious to the home of Dr. Taft Anton of Turnpike rd., Shrewsbury, where he died a few minutes later.

Wheeler's bicycle was found by police in a secluded side road, known as Lovers' lane, more than three quarters of a mile from the scene of the accident. Near it police found a bag of clothing and the splintered remains of an automobile headlight, which they believe was shattered by the force of the collision. Apparently the bike was dragged away by the car and the motorist disengaged it in the lane.

State police immediately launched an investigation of the accident, the second of its kind in three days. In a similar tragedy, three young girls walking through the rain to a Halloween party Tuesday evening were run down. One was instantly killed and another critically injured.

Everett Youth Group Spurs Drive on 'Spicy' Magazine

Indignation of a group of Everett boys and girls today spurred police and city officials in a drive to clear city news stands of a magazine containing purported spicy stories.

The youthful group, apparently overhearing chums describing salacious passages from the magazine's contents, banded into a protest group and demanded the city be rid of the offending literature.

The vigilante committee, headed by Easton Chapman of the Malverett Christian Endeavor Union, was supported by the board of censors in its stand.

ARMLESS MOTHER REARS 9TH BABY

SAFFORD, Oriz., Nov. 3 (AP)—A six-day-old girl snuggled close to her armless mother, unaware that it was anything but normal to be juggled about for feeding and other care by a pair of feet instead of hands.

The mother, Mrs. Ruth Matthews, a transient, has eight other children. Despite dozens of offers for adoption, she expressed determination to keep the baby, born alongside a highway Saturday.

"It will not take much to feed the baby. It won't cost much," she added anxiously.

Because of the child's birth, Matthews has found a job on a nearby ranch and a house in which the family may live. Having a roof over its head, Mrs. Matthews related, is a new experience for her family.

At her insistence, Mrs. Matthews was released from the hospital to go to her new home, on the edge of one of the upper Gila valley's many cotton fields.

Her armless condition is congenital. Asked how she manages a family and household duties under such a handicap, she said:

"I don't know. But I do manage. I get along. You can do an awful lot with your feet. I can thread a needle, sew, launder and iron, take care of the children and feed myself.

"I'll be able to take just as good care of my baby as you do in the hospital."

Another patient exclaimed: "I saw her lift her baby with her feet, move it from one side of the bed to the other and place it in position for feeding."

Nurses said the child, born in near-freezing temperature, weighs 6¾ pounds and is perfectly normal. It feeds seven times a day.

U. S. in New Trade Row With Italy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (INS)—The United States government, an official source disclosed today has lodged formal and emphatic protests with Italy over its asserted discrimination against American goods.

Italy, in turn, has filed counter-complaints with the State Department concerning the Treasury's imposition of penalty tariffs upon certain Italian goods, this source revealed.

2 'BARRED' FROM LOAN BUSINESS

Murray Sandler, president, and Steward "Slim" Smith, appraiser, for the Stratton Finance Co., have been barred by Judge Frank J. Donahue from participation in the "small loan business" in any form pending trial of their cases.

Both men surrendered to Superior Court to answer indictments brought by the Suffolk County grand jury investigating small loan agencies.

Sandler and his company are charged with multiple counts of larceny, conspiracy to violate the small loans law by charging exorbitant interest rates and with other violations. Smith is charged with conspiracy in the alleged violations.

Both pleaded not guilty and Sandler pleaded not guilty in the name of the company. Sandler was held for trial in $3500 while Smith was held in $1000. They were granted two weeks in which to file special pleas.

Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever charged that the Stratton Co. was operated as a time-payment plan auto repair shop and that customers, required to sign "agreements for repairs" for their cars had papers "switched" on them and found out afterward that instead of agreements for repairs they had signed mortgages on their cars and promissory notes.

140,000 Jews Ask U. S. Haven

Because of Nazi persecution, 140,000 Jews in Vienna desire to escape to America, Eibert F. Carver, United States immigration bureau adviser, declared today following his arrival in Boston on the American Export Lines steamer Excambion.

The annual quota of 27,000 persons from Germany and Austria combined would make it impossible for Vienna Jews to reach the United States for many years, he said.

Passengers on the Excambion said the ship passed through an area off Gibraltar where the water was littered with debris of the torpedoed British freighter Ledbury.

ROBERT KENT AND ASTRID ALLWYN
When Love Was Sweet, Not Bitter

Film Careers Wreck Bob Kent Marriage

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor International News Service

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 3 (INS)—Two careers in one family failed to work out in the case of Astrid Allwyn and Robert Kent, two young motion picture players, so within the next 10 days Astrid will ask a judge to grant her a divorce from her good looking husband.

She will mention mental cruelty, Hollywood's favorite grounds for divorce. Yet those on the inside know that it is another case of two people living under the same roof who each want a career and find that peaceful domesticity does not lend itself to divided interests.

Kenneth Holland, attorney representing Astrid, has already drawn up the papers which will be filed shortly.

The divorce follows Miss Allwyn's success as the senator's daughter in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," her biggest opportunity to date following her career as a 20th Century-Fox actress.

It was at this studio, where Kent, also under contract, met the attractive Astrid and after a highly romantic courtship they were married two years ago.

Particularly sad is the parting of the Kents, for they have a little daughter, Kristina, 16 months, whose custody will be sought by her mother.

Bar Association Gives Lectures

The Bar Association of the city of Boston is sponsoring a course of six lectures on the new rules of civil procedure for the district courts of the United States to be given in United States District Court, Court Room No. 6 on successive Mondays at 4:30, begining Nov. 13, and ending Dec. 18.

The course, like previous courses sponsored by the association, will be open to all lawyers, whether members of the Bar Association of the city of Boston or not. Admission will be only by tickets purchased from the association.

The lectures will be delivered by Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant attorney general of the United States.

SHIPPING HERE HIT BY STRIKE

Boston's south-bound coastwise shipping traffic was partially paralyzed today as 5000 longshoremen walked out in New York and the Eastern Steamship Co. cancelled its New York sailings "until further notice."

Tonight's boat to New York had been entirely sold out to Army-Notre Dame game fans, officials of the line disclosed.

Emphasizing that the strike will not affect Boston to Yarmouth sailings, Eastern heads took action after Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Ass'n, A. F. of L., called the walkout when the union's compromise proposal of a five-cent-an-hour wage increase was turned down by coastwise shipping companies.

5000 IDLE

The union had earlier asked for a ten-cent raise and a 40-hour week, to replace the old contract provision of 95 cents an hour for a 44 hour week.

With 5000 longshoremen idle, it was predicted that another 5000 shore workers for the nine lines affected would be thrown out of work, should the strike continue for more than a few days.

Vessels plying to foreign ports in coastwise traffic, such as Eastern's Yarmouth run, the United Fruit Line's Caribbean ships, and Moore & McCormack's European and South American traders, were not held up.

RYAN EXPRESSES REGRET

Expressing regret for "this very unfortunate strike," Ryan announced himself available at any time for a conference with representatives of the affected lines.

John E. Craig, vice-president of the Clyde-Mallory lines, spokesman for the operators, declared that business conditions do not warrant a pay increase to the longshoremen.

Why so HIGH-HAT Mr. Big?

MOVE OVER, mister—the special distinction of wearing a Rochester-tailored overcoat is no longer reserved for the chosen few. Maybe you haven't heard, but this year Bond opens the way for a lot of men to enjoy Rochester quality who never have before. Yes sir, we mean the same suave style, the same rich woolens, the same skillful needlework in which you've always taken pride. But look what we've done to the prices! You see, Bond is the only retail clothier in America with a tailoring plant in Rochester. And the Bond store near you is part of that plant. As a hard-headed business man, you know how such a streamlined system cuts costs. So if you notice many of the men on your payroll wearing overcoats like yours, give them credit for knowing a good thing when they see it. Why not join the swing to Bond's yourself?

Kermit Rejoins British Army

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP) Kermit Roosevelt, fully recovered from a slight illness, has begun active training as a British machine-gun specialist with the Middlesex Regiment, friends said today.

They added that there had been no change in the status of the son of the former President as an American citizen. British citizenship is not necessarily required of an officer of the British army.

Roosevelt, who accepted a second lieutenant's commission, is slated for rank of acting major when he finishes his machine-gun course.

NAZIS HIT HARD BY BLOCKADE

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 3 (INS)—Hailed as one of the most vital arms of the British war machine, the contraband control system in two months has intercepted and detained more than half a million tons of goods "suspected" of having been destined for Germany.

Showing for the first time that France's navy is co-operating vigorously with Britain in the seizure of contraband, the ministry of economic warfare said that of the amount taken, the French confiscated 150,000 tons.

The figures do not include the capture of German merchant ships by the British navy, but apply strictly to cargoes taken from the vessels of neutral nations, which are forced to put into control ports for inspection.

"The ministry of economic warfare," the official statement pointed out, "is purely an offensive weapon, to strike at Germany's economic structure. It is becoming more important than ever, because of the German army's tremendous mechanization."

How the contraband control system hits the German army's motor equipment was shown in the announcement that petroleum products totaling 87,540 tons, including 12,006,000 gallons of gasoline, were seized.

Nazi Bombardment Silenced by French

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Nov. 3 (INS)—Until they were silenced by a powerful French counter-bombardment, German guns today resumed heavy shelling on an unidentified French village about ten miles northwest of Sarreguemines.

French army lines and settlements were pounded with six-inch shells, in an area near the district of Forbach, which suffered a heavy bombardment yesterday.

New German troop concentrations today were reported behind the lines north of Sarreguemines, indicating the possibility that a large German raid is in the making.

Today's communique, No. 121, indicated additional infantry clashes as well. The bulletin said:

"The night was quiet, except for some artillery and infantry fire.

FRANCE HAILS REPEAL

More than on the war itself, however, attention was centered in France today on the enthusiastically-received actio nof the American House of Representatives in supporting repeal of the embargo act.

Lucien Bourgues, a semi-official spokesman, wrote in the Petit Parisien:

"We can mark this day with a white mile-stone. Free America has responded to a just cause. To her moral support, already so precious, will come soon her material support, which will hasten the hour of our victory."

Excelsior said editorially:

"We'll ask no more!"

Huge orders for equipment, mainly aviation, have been placed in the United States, the Echo de Paris recalled, and these now will be available for speedy delivery. On all sides it was emphasized that quick delivery of the planes will play a highly important part in the struggle.

MINISTERS MEET

After hearing a long outline of the general situation from Premier Edouard Daladier, the council approved several decrees which, however, were not at once made public.

Military officials in Paris today said a maximum of 20 stray shells from German field pieces landed on the outskirts of Forbach village itself in yesterday's bombardment. The shelling, it was explained, was not aimed at the town itself.

Goering Reported Planning Rome Visit

ROME, Nov. 3 (INS)—Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, today significantly reprinted the announcement in the English press that Field Marshal Goering of Germany would come to Rome next Tuesday. There is no official confirmation of the report at present.

NEW TRADE PACT GOAL OF ITALY

ROME, Nov. 3 (AP)—Italy has entered the European treaty-making contest to improve her status as a neutral and strengthen her influence in southeastern Europe.

An exchange of Greek-Italian letters, dated Sept. 30, affirming friendship and expressing a desire to give "more concrete form" to relations between Athens and Rome was published today.

The letters pointed the way toward negotiations for "happy and fruitful collaboration in all fields"—apparently prefacing a new non-aggression pact.

Foreign observers expected Italy to seek wider trade advantages from Greece as she has done in a new commercial agreement with Yugo-Slavia and another about to be signed with Bulgaria.

The pact with Greece which Italians hoped soon to conclude would replace the 10-year non-aggression treaty of 1928.

With it Premier Mussolini would seek to reinforce his influence in the Balkans to counter-balance the recent Turkish-French-British mutual aid treaty, protecting Italy's strategic as well as commercial interests in a region considered vital.

The Italian press refrained from comment on the Greek-Italian letters, but the prospect of pacts with Greece and Bulgaria emphasized recent statements by informed Fascists that Rome had no intention of surrendering her position in southeastern Europe.

French Turn Back Big German Bomber

BASEL, Switzerland, Nov. 3 (INS)—A huge German bombing plane attempting to cross the border into France was turned back damaged by six fast French pursuit ships today.

Observers in Basel were able to read the insignia J-AS Junker 52 on the German plane and heard bursts of machine-gun fire. The French suddenly attacked from a high altitude, forcing the bomber to wheel about with the enemy ships in swift pursuit and head back toward the Siegfried line.

Report Air Raiders Battle Off Scotland

LONDON, Nov. 3 (INS)—Intense aerial activity in the Firth of Forth area, scene of two damaging German raids, was reported by the London Evening News from Edinburgh today.

It was believed that enemy aircraft approaching the Scottish coast had been intercepted and engaged by British planes a few miles at sea.

The air raid warnings were not sounded in towns in the neighborhood and no gunfire was heard.

The air ministry, however, formally denied the Evening News' story, stating no enemy aircraft were in the Scotland area during the day.

Plane Wouldn't Fly, Tosses It in River

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 3 (AP)—Angered because it wouldn't fly, Richard Burns, 22, hauled his airplane to the Kaw river and tossed it in.

Burns said he spent $400 for repairs on the plane in the past year.

15,000 WAIT PAY RAISE

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 3—More than 15,000 textile workers today awaited a 7 per cent wage increase, effective Monday. The new scale, based on the payroll which went into effect in January, 1938, was formulated at a conference of union representatives and cotton manufacturers.

BRITAIN WOOS EMPIRE

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Britain courted her empire today with expressions of faith in its solidarity for the job of war.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, in his weekly report on the progress of the war, told the House of Commons "we have had in the last few days a striking demonstration of the united determination of the empire." The House interrupted Chamberlain eight times with cheers.

Seated in the gallery were special representatives of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India.

When a member brought up in the House of Lords the subject of renewal of Mohandas K. Gandhi's efforts toward dominion status for India, another peer rebuked him for "raising this fateful matter at the present time."

The Daily Telegraph commented, "Hopes, we know, were cherished in the dictatorships that the empire would never again stand together in war. Those delusions are gone with the snows of yesteryear."

HUGE WAR ORDERS FOR U. S.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (AP)—A billion dollars worth of European orders is expected by some officials to be placed with American manufacturers as soon as President Roosevelt signs the arms embargo bill.

They estimated that amount would be contracted within a few weeks, with most of the supplies going to Great Britain and France.

Enactment of the bill will permit Great Britain and France to obtain some 300 warplanes which have been completed since the embargo was imposed.

Cancelled export licenses for planes and munitions probably will be reinstated. Great Britain's impounded orders aggregate $14,650,807 and those of France $58,205,739.

British and French purchases are expected to include:

Officials were informed that even before embargo repeal was voted by the House a French purchasing mission contracted for 4600 airplane motors from two eastern manufacturers. A British mission has been negotiating for about 1800 training planes; a Swedish mission for upwards of 250 aircraft and a Belgian mission for 266.

Canadian League To Fete Premier

Premier Thaine A. Campbell, Prince Edward Island, Canada, will be the guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Canadian American League at the Parker House Nov. 9. Premier Campbell will be welcomed to the city of Boston by Mayor Tobin, by giving him a breakfast the morning of his arrival at the Parker House.

Following the breakfast Campbell will make official visits to the State House, City Hall and Supreme and Superior Courts. On Friday, Nov. 10, Premier Campbell, who is a Rhodes scholar, will make an official visit to Harvard University.

Britain May Delay Rationing 'Till Jan. 1

LONDON, Nov. 3 (INS)—Because of the torrent of opposition raked by the press and public, rationing of butter and bacon may be postponed a fortnight until Jan. 1, it was learned today. By that time, it was felt, stocks may be increased to a point which will permit allowances greater than the four ounces of each product intended for each person per week.

Sunken Ship Crew Landed at Wales

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP) The captain and 24 crewmen of the 3402-ton British steamer Mervyn, sunk in collision with an unidentified steamer off the coast of Wales last Wednesday, were landed at Llanelly, Wales, today. Four of the crew still were missing.

New Dads Sent Home From War

PARIS, Nov. 3 (AP)—Soldiers who have become fathers since the war began went home today to see their babies.

Three-day furloughs were made possible under a special decree in keeping with the Daladier program of encouraging family life even in wartime. The government paid the fares.

To make sure there was no deception the fathers were required to bring back with them the new baby's certificates.

Plenty of Cash to Carry On 'Victorious War,' Nazis Insist

BERLIN, Nov. 3 (AP)—The German press published tax statistics today which it said showed the Reich was prepared financially to carry the war to a "victorious end."

Tax revenues for the second quarter of 1939—July 1 to Sept. 30 were reported to have amounted to 6,179,000,000 marks (approximately $2,417,960,000) which, the newspapers said, was 1,500,000,000 marks (about $600,000,000) above revenues during the same period last year.

Germany's decision to permit citizens of India caught in this country by the war to leave without being treated as enemies was announced today. Thirty Indian citizens are to be taken to the Netherlands frontier.

Hint Italy May Quit Rome-Berlin Axis to Take Sides With Great Britain

LONDON, Nov. 3 (INS)—Italy will desert the Rome-Berlin axis completely and even possibly join Great Britain and France in the war against Germany if Adolf Hitler makes an aggressive moves against the Balkan countries.

This was the belief expressed in high neutral diplomatic circles in London today, which at the same time acknowledged Premier Mussolini's genuine and since desire to stay out of the conflict.

Mussolini was represented in these circles as "pushed to the limit of hi spatience" by the Russo-German rapprochement — Communism still being poison to the Italians and is actively building fences around Yugoslavia, Hungary, Greece and Turkey in an encirclement movement of his own to preserve the Mediterranean as Italy's sphere of influence.

U. S. RISKS WAR, VIEW OF NAZIS

By PIERRE J. HUSS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Nov. 3 (INS)—Belief that the United States has risked eventual involvement in Europe's war by congressional repeal of the arms embargo was expressed in Berlin today.

While Nazi officialdom withheld formal comment until President Roosevelt has signed the repeal measure, the conviction was voiced that America has further jeopardized her neutrality.

"Grave war risks are entailed in wholesale delivery of arms and planes," one spokesman said.

Authentic quarters laid stress on Mrs. Roosevelt's reported remark that ocean boundaries are not sufficient to keep the United States out of war.

German newspapers openly charged that British propaganda played a major role in repeal of the embargo. They cited in particular the case of the British freighter Coulmore to whose aid American coast guard cutters and planes were sent after receipt of an apparently erroneous report that she was being attacked by a submarine.

"This was another British manoeuver cooked up at the right moment to exert moral pressure on Congress and trick it into repealing the embargo," the press said.

It was officially stated today that no German submarine was anywhere near the spot in the Atlantic where the alleged attack occurred.

Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Gobbel's newspaper labeled the incident as "a dirty new British swindle" and a "stupid bluff to mislead Americans."

Meanwhile, official quarters threw cold water on reports of Italo-German differences, stating that Hans Georg von Mackensen, German ambassador to Rome who returned to Berlin recently for consultations, would go back to his post tomorrow.

Military headquarters emphasized the lack of activity on the western front.

"Three weeks behind the front, three weeks in pillboxes, three weeks in outpost service and three weeks' leave" is the order of the day, according to the high command. Chancellor Hitler meanwhile is occupied daily with routine conferences.

Doggone It!

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 3 (AP)—Police Chief Harry Mackey went to search for thieves who had stolen 10 dogs recently. When he returned, his own two dogs were missing.

WILL 'PINCH OF SALT' FATHER FUTURE RACE?

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (INS)—A baby rabbit, whose father was only a pinch of common salt, now on exhibition at the New York Academy of Medicine, started doctors here speculating about the possibility of producing human test tube babies.

Dr. Gregory Goodwin Pincus, now of Clark University, produced this fatherless bunny by activating the egg-cell of a female rabbit with a salt solution at Harvard University's physiological laboratories.

Prof. Pincus straitled the scientific world at the American physiological Society meeting, at Washington, in April, 1936, by announcing that he was able to fertilize artificially the rabbit egg-cells with salt, heat and other methods.

The scientific importance of the experiment was that it revealed just what was necessary before the egg-cell of a mammal could be developed in the body of a female, a mother or a substitute mother.

By simply putting the egg-cells and the male sperm cells of the rabbits in a dish, no results could be obtained.

However, treatment with salt and heat activated the egg-cell and prepared it for fertilization with the sperm-cell. In the body of the mother, the same kind of activation could be produced by stimulating the nerves which are connected with the anterior pituitary gland.

Dr. Pincus' researches may provide the missing links in thompiete process of producing test tube mammal baby. Like man beings the rabbits are classil as mammals.

All day long doctors crowd in to see the marvel but none othem were sure the phenomenon hiany bearing in relation to the lman race.

OLD SOUTH CUSTOMS IN DIARY

SAN MARINO, Cal., Nov. 3 (AP)—An American "Samuel Pepys" who told his wife not to pluck her eyebrows and got away with it has been discovered during the researches of the Virginia Byrds.

Dr. Louis B. Wright of the Huntington Library's research staff told the Pasadena Athenaeum here of the important discovery of the Library of a 250-year-old historical journal written by William Byrd III, of Westover, Va., who lived from 1674 to 1744.

"I rose about 8 o'clock and found my cold still worse. I said my prayers and ate ham and potatoes for breakfast. My wife and I quarreled about her pulling her brows. She threatened she would not go to Williamsburg if she might not pull them; I refused, however, and got the better of her and maintained my authority."

DRINK WINE

On Nov. 14, 1709:

"In the evening we drank a bottle of wine pretty freely and were full of mirth and good humor and particularly Colonel Waters. However, we were merry and wise and went to bed in good time by my means. I neglected to say prayers, but had good health, good thoughts, and good humor, thanks be to God Almighty."

"To that body of informal literature of which Pepys's diary is the most famous example, Byrd's diary is an important contribution," Dr. Wright said.

"Byrd was one of the most important men of letters in the South before the Revolutionary War, and the diary is extremely valuable for the light it throws on intellectual and social conditions in Virginia in the colonial period. Indeed, it is one of the few diaries for the South."

DEEPLY RELIGIOUS

The particular diary now being transcribed and edited covers the years 1709 to 1712, and will run about 220,000 words. Another portion, from 1733 to 1741, has been discovered at the University of North Carolina, and a third portion from 1717 to 1721 has been found among papers of the Virginia Historical Society.

"No trifle is too insignificant to find a place in the journal," Dr. Wright noted. "The diary also shows that Byrd was deeply religious, and furnishes a needed corrective to the notion that the so-called Cavaliers of Virginia were an utterly worldly race without regard for Godliness."

Aiken Seeks End Of Truck Strike

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 3—Although some 400 union truck drivers throughout the state today continued their strike, Gov. George D. Aiken hoped to bring about a settlement in a conference on the transportation of milk.

The governor's request that milk trucks be exempt from provisions of the strike, a condition already accepted by the strikers, may be the means to a peaceful settlement of differences at a conference today of truck owners' and strikers' representatives.

Fingerprints Clue In Kidnap-Robbery

Two sets of fingerprints, taken from the trunk of a sedan, today furnished police their best clues in the search for a trio of bandits who kidnaped a beano party manager and robbed him of $1000.

Four hours after Paul I. Delaney, 38, of King st., Dorchester, had been held up in front of Dorchester Manor, near the Mattapan police station, officers found his car abandoned at Neponset Circle.

PAPERS STREWN ABOUT

Numerous business papers were strewn about the interior of the machine but the cash, which Delaney had placed in a satchel and tin box and then locked in the rear trunk compartment, was missing.

The $1000 included operating funds and receipts from a beano party, operated by Delaney, and staged by the auxiliary of Boston Police Post 251, American Legion.

Delaney was just entering his auto when the three men, all armed, converged on him from the shadows of an alley.

Delaney was shoved into the rear of the car and slugged over the head with a gun butt. He felt the car start and was able to trace its progress along Morton st., to Wildwood st., Dorchester, where the three threw him out.

LIFE THREATENED

Two times before he was hurled from the auto, his life was threatened by the gun men, Delaney said.

Because of the darkness, he was unable to see his assailants clearly or obtain descriptions of them. One was about 40 years old, he told Sergt. Francis C. Berringer, in charge of the investigation.

PAUL DELANEY
Robbed of $1000

ACCUSED AS AIDE IN HOLDUP

A 20-year-old Somerville youth was taken to court today to face charges of participating in a filling station holdup in Green street, Somerville, during which Anthony F. Marino, 45, the attendant, was shot twice.

Despite his wounds, Marino captured his assailant, a 14-year-old boy, and held him until police arrived. The boy was identified by police as Robert J. Forster of Eustis street, Cambridge, and is held in $15,000 bonds. The older youth is quoted as admitting he was in Forster's company.

However, he denied that he took any part in the attempted robbery, or that he had a gun. He said he ran away when he realized there was a holdup.

He is also said to have admitted that he was with Forster during a dog-shooting escapade in Cambridge, but denied he took any active part in it.

On Tuesday night, the handbag of Mrs. Bessie Weinberg, who runs a small store at Washington and Cherry sts., Cambridge, was stolen by two youths who were attacked by a dog. One of them fired three shots, slightly wounding the animal and driving him off.

HEIRESS to great sugar fortune and now aspiring to be an actress, Mrs. Geraldine Spreckels, shown here, will appear in Boston Monday, Nov. 13, in the opening of a new musical comedy, "DuBarry Was a Lady." It will be her first stage appearance, though she has already signed a Hollywood contract for film work.

SUGAR HEIRESS IN STAGE PLAY HERE

Blonde and glamorous Geraldine Spreckels, heiress to a sugar fortune, will take the first step to a dramatic career here Nov. 13, when she appears in a "sextette of beauties" at the opening of the new musical comedy" DuBarry Was a Lady."

It will be the first time the glamorous divorcee has appeared on the stage, although already she has signed a contract in Hollywood for film productions. Her role, it was reported, is a minor one, but she expressed ambition for stage training before appearing in pictures.

Only a year ago the blonde heiress obtained a divorce in San Francisco from Adolph Barnard Spreckels, Jr., her second cousin, whom she married in London in July, 1936. Spreckels had already obtained Reno divorces from two socialite heiress wives—Mrs. Gloria Debevoise Spreckels, his second wife, and Mrs. Louis Clarke de Ruyter Spreckels, his first wife.

Both are grandchildren of the late Adolph B. Spreckels of San Francisco, who amassed a $20,000,000 estate in sugar and left approximately $3,000,000 each to his heirs. The fortune inherited by the lovely Geraldine, however, dwindled rapidly and last year she claimed that $500,000 of her inheritance had "slipped through her fingers."

It was then she sought fame in Hollywood, under the name of "Anna Johns," claiming she wished to achieve a career entirely through talent and "on her own."

Edward Hogan Sees Victory

Edward M. Hogan of Everett, seeking re-election to the board of aldermen in that city, today is pointing for victory next Tuesday following his triumph in the primary.

Edward Hogan

Hogan was active in Democratic and labor circles in Everett for a number of years and was founder of the Welfare Council there.

He was on the Democratic ward and city committee, and served on the city council from Ward 6. In 1931, after serving there four years, he was elected president of the city council by unanimous vote.

Tea Time Stays For Examiner

Boston will retain its tea examiner, it was announced today.

The Boston Port Authority, Maritime Association and other groups emerged victorious in their campaign to keep Emery C. Griswold of Melrose in that position.

'Ole Man River' Flows Backward From Gulf

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 3 (AP)—Salt water from the 110-mile distant Gulf of Mexico flowed through New Orleans city water mains today for the second time in more than forty years and speckled trout were being caught at the foot of Canal st. for the first time in memory.

Due to prolonged drought through its entire watershed, the Mississippi has reached an almost record low and gulf tides flowed into the long Delta Channel. The city's water supply is taken from the river. Authorities said the salt content is yet below government requirements. The mains were saline for a time in 1936.

The ordinarily tawny river which rushes millions of tons of yellow clay and black soil past New Orleans annually has turned a placid gulf blue, its surface dropping far below the levee tops that line its banks for hundreds of miles northward.

River men believed the river would drop still lower unless unexpected rains come in the watershed, stretching from the Yellowstone to Pittsburgh.

The low stage of water points breaking record set in 1910 has severely handicapped barge and steamer traffic, stopped river service and forced carriers to lighten their loads on boats operating as far north as Cairo, Ill.

Largest boats have been tied up, and some docks north of here have been rendered useless by the water.

Schools Next in Dies Probe

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Declaring that Communism has crept into "practically every university in the United States," Chairman Dies (D.) of Texas, announced today that "eminent educators" would be called soon to testify before the House committee investigating un-American activities.

Dies said the committee would conclude its study of maritime labor today and then recess for two or three weeks before starting hearings on educational institutions.

"Well known professors will make out a startling case showing how Communism has infiltrated into colleges and universities throughout the land," Dies said.

He added that Communistic textbooks used in some public grade schools and colleges would be introduced into the committee record, together with evidence showing how Communist party units were formed on campuses.

Dies predicted also that the committee would go to the West Coast early next year to investigate Communism in labor unions and in Hollywood.

Maxwell Rabb Weds at Capital

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—Miss Ruth Creidenberg and Mr. Maxwell M. Rabb, both of Brookline, were married, with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., as best man. A reception at the Shoreham Hotel followed

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Creidenberg, is a graduate of Radcliffe College. Mr. Rabb, secretary to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., is a graduate of Harvard College, '32, and Harvard Law school, '35. He is a member of the Harvard Club of Boston and junion member of the law firm of Rabb & Rabb.

Mr. and Mrs. John Davis Lodge, Mrs. George Cabot Lodge, Lt. Col. and Mrs. W. D. Crutenberger and Assistant District Attorney and Mrs. George L. Rabb were among the guests.

Pair Hold Up Dawes Hotel

Two men walked into the Rufus F. Dawes hotel on Pine st., South End, a semi-charitable refuge for homeless men, held up the clerk, and escaped with $29.59 from the cash box.

Francis Crowley, the clerk, told police one of the men, who kept his hand in his coat pocket as if pointing a gun, watched him, while the other went straight to the cash box, as if familiar with the hotel layout. He described one of the men as dark, and about 30 years old. The other, he said, had a mustache, and was about 40.

Horse Thief Hunted By Philly Cops

Police were ordered to be on the lookout for a white horse and green wagon, taken from a trolley pole to which the horse was hitched.

Two Girls, Man Treated After Crash in Maine

LEWISTON, Me., Nov. 3—Two girls and a man were in a hospital here today with severe injuries suffered in a head-on collision on the brow of a hill overlooking a sharp curve at Greene, six miles from here.

Most seriously injured was Miss Simone Bolduc, 18, who suffered a possible fracture of the skull, concussion of the brain and multiple bruises and abrasions. Her sister, Priscilla, 13, suffered concussion, lacerations of the face and head and severe bruises.

They were occupants of a car driven by Alba E. Odiorne, 59, of Greene, who suffered a broken arm and foot and severe bruises.

Frank L. Parker, 80, of Greene, driver of the other car, suffered minor injuries but did not go to the hospital. Three other occupants of the Odiorne car were unhurt.

EMERSON SERVICES TOMORROW

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, Watertown, for Dr. Sara A. Emerson, 84, former teacher at Wellesley College, who died Wednesday at her home on Worthington st., Roxbury, after a long illness.

She was the only living member of the class of 1877 at Boston University, taking her doctorate in biblical history and Semitics. She joined the Wellesley faculty in 1877, first as an instructor in Latin, later becoming an associate professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Literature. She also taught in Washington, had traveled extensively abroad and was active in the foreign missionary work of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

D. T. PERCY, JR.

Funeral services will be held at the Hartwell Chapel, 792 Massachusetts ave., Arlington, at 4 p. m. tomorrow for David T. Percy, Jr., war veteran and singer who had played several singing roles in motion pictures. He died Saturday in Los Angeles. He is survived by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. David T. Percy of Water st., Arlington. A veteran of the Yankee division, he was gassed and wounded in the battle of Chateau Thierry. Also surviving are his widow, Mrs. Constance Percy and a daughter, Ellen, of Los Angeles.

Dr. Lindgren, Geologist, Dies

Dr. Waldemar Lindgren, 79, internationally renowned geologist who retired as head of the M. I. T. Geology Department six years ago, died today at his Kinross rd., Brookline, home.

Known as one of the world's greatest authorities on his subject, Dr. Lindgren had kept an office at Technology, and was active in his profession until a few weeks ago.

Dr. Lindgren was born in Kalmar, Sweden, and was educated in that country and in Germany. In 1884 he came to the United States and joined the staff of the U. S. Geological Survey.

He began to lecture at M. I. T. in 1908, and in 1912 was appointed head of the school's geology department. In 1937, the London Geological Society presented him with the Wollaston Medal, an honor once bestowed on Sir Charles Darwin.

Holder of honorary degrees from universities here and abroad, Dr. Lindgren was a member of many scientific organizations.

Renew Peace Efforts In Chrysler Dispute

DETROIT, Nov. 3 (AP)—Working together for the first time, state and federal mediators today revived negotiations here in an effort to end the month-long deadlock between Chrysler Corp. and the CIO United Automobile Workers.

James F. Dewey, federal conciliator, and Arthur E. Raab, chairman of the State Labor Board, assumed the roles of "co-mediators" after a personal appeal by Gov. Luren D. Dickinson.

Tropical Disturbance North of Jamaica

16 Bay State Cities Go to Polls Tuesday

Although next Tuesday will be an off-year election day in Massachusetts, there will be school and council contest fights in Boston, while Worcester is preparing for its hottest fight in years.

Other cities which will have elections are Cambridge, Everett, Fitchburg, Gardner, Leominster, Lowell, Lynn, Marlboro, Medford, Pittsfield, Somerville, Springfield, Waltham and Westfield.

A close vote is predicted in Worcester in the fight between former Mayor John S. Sullivan, Democrat, and Mayor William A. Bennett, Republican. Sullivan was defeated at the last election by Bennett's margin of 96 votes.

More than 93,000 voters are registered in Worcester, the largest number in the history of the city.

In Leominster, where the campaign has been quiet, 28 candidate are contesting for 14 elective posts. Thirteen candidates among the 28 are seeking re-election. Mayor Sidney E. Bell is opposed by Senator Edward H. Nutting and Elmer Whitney.

In Marlboro, Mayor Louis F. Ingalls is seeking re-election and former Mayor Charles A. Lyons is attempting a comeback.

Fitchburg, with 15 elective offices to be filled, has a three-cornered mayoralty fight between the incumbent, Mayor Alfred Woollacott, former State Representative Louis N. M. Deschenes and former State Senator George W. Stanton. The other offices to be filled include five councilors-at-large, six ward councilors and three school committee members.

Pittsfield with a record registration of 24,212, will elect a mayor, city clerk, 11 councilmen, and three school committeemen.

In Westfield Mayor Raymond H. Cowing will seek his fifth two-year term in a non-partisan election. He will be opposed by Mrs. Alice D. Burke, former member of the school committee.

Springfield has two candidates for mayor in Mayor Roger L. Putnam, Democrat, and Attorney Donald M. Macaulay, former city solicitor and a prominent Republican. Putnam, millionaire and nephew of Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard has been making a house-to-house and store-to-store canvass.

End of a Tale

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3 (AP)—The little boy was careless about letting his shirt-tail hang out, so his mother, Mrs. Margaret Reed, devised a cure. She sewed bits of lace and embroidery on the tails. Now he keeps them out of sight.

HOOVER, AL SMITH JOIN HANDS IN PLEA FOR YOUTH

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (INS)—Former President Herbert Hoover and former Governor Alfred E. Smith, political adversaries in 1928, joined hands on the same platform here in a scathing denunciation of dictatorship nations of Europe.

Addressing a meeting at the Waldorf Astoria of 1148 prominent New Yorkers launching an appeal by the Y. M. C. A. of New York for funds to finance its youth program, Hoover charged that "cunning organization and organized thuggery are the foundations" of the groups in control of Russia and Germany, and an examination of them discloses "they are largely fed by the products of the pavement and frustrated youth."

Smith declared that "the dictator countris have no trouble taking care of youth." He said that "they just slap them into the army."

Voters Lack of Interest May Upset City Election

By FRANK REILLY

Officials of the municipal election commission today estimated that only 200,000 of Boston's 345,000 registered voters will go to the polls to participate in the municipal election next Tuesday.

Failure of the majority of the 22 candidates for school committee to conduct active campaigns and lack of interest in City Council contests in many wards will result in the light vote, officials said.

Several of the school committee candidates who earlier in the week were coasting along, assuming that they had properly estimated their own political strength were so aroused to learn that the three places on the board had been conceded to others that they reorganized their entire campaign committees.

As a result some of these candidates are making greater progress than they were 72 hours ago. Various political observers have indicated that City Councilor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park, School Committeeman Patrick J. Foley of South Boston, School Committeeman Joseph C. White of West Roxbury, and Daniel J. McDevitt of Jamaica Plain have, by energetic campaigning, taken lead positions in the field.

CANDIDATES AROUSED

Most aroused by the turn of events were Edmund J. Walsh of Charlestown, who received more than 21,000 votes in his initial bid for election to the board two years ago; William W. Drummey, former superintendent of schoolhouse construction; Dr. Joseph V. Lyons, former board member, who was defeated for re-election in 1937, and John J. Burke of Roxbury, who claims the suport of many friends of Mayor Tobin.

Too little attention is said to have been paid the women candidates in the contest. For more than a generation, until the retirement of Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon from the board in 1933, a woman usually held membership in the committee.

There are three women candidates in the present field, Miss Anna M. Niland, who retired recently after 50 years service as a Boston school teacher, Miss Josephine H. Lally of Dorchester, who received 33,000 votes when she sought election to the committee two years ago, and Mrs. Hattie M. Smith of West Roxbury.

Miss Niland is a member of the National Education Association, Boston Teachers Club, Teachers College Alumni Association, and of numerous state and national groups dedicated to the welfare of the child of school age.

Each of the trio is actively campaigning nightly, and it is conceivable that one of them may win a seat in the committee.

CONTROVERSIAL ISSUE

Republicans are quietly preparing to bring out a large vote in support of the candidacies of Alexander Welch of Back Bay, president of the Suffolk County Republican League, and of Mrs. Smith who is a member of the Ward 20 Republican committee.

Leaders of the Republican movement are convinced that with the light vote to be cast and with the large field of candidates it is possible for their minority group to elect both Welch and Mrs. Smith and thus obtain partial control of the committee.

First controversial issue raised in the present campaign came when Edmund J. Walsh of Charlestown declared that, if elected to the committee, he will seek to compel all teachers of the school department to reside in Boston. Nearly 20 per cent of the 4500 instructors are non-residents, Walsh charged.

Of the City Council contests greatest interest seems to be centered in the battle in Ward 3, comprising North and West Ends and a portion of South End.

There City Councillor John I. Fitzgerald, president of the Hendricks Club, dominating political factor in the ward for a half century, is being opposed in his contest for a seventh two-year term by Joseph Russo, Rep. George J. Leary and Laurence Haley.

Russo, as the only Italian-American candidate in the contest, hopes to be victorious because approximately 50 per cent of the registered voters of the ward are persons of his racial group. Rep. Leary claims victory because of numerous endorsements of his candidacy by prominent citizens and substantial organizations of the ward. Fitzgerald tonight at Tyler st. municipal building begins a final drive that will take him into every precinct of the ward by Monday night.

'Arctic Blankets' New Cancer 'Cure'

By G. B. LAL
International News Service Science Editor

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (INS)—"Arctic blankets" have replaced the "Arctic packs" in the treatment of advanced cancer, Dr. Temple Fay, the discoverer of the dramatic refrigeration treatment, revealed here at the annual dinner of the New York City Cancer Committee.

Prof. Fay and his colleague, Prof. Lawrence W. Smith of Temple University, Philadelphia, told of their famous new treatment.

Dr. Fay said:

"Refrigeration has been induced on patients between the ages of 17 months and 66 years. Apparently if these low temperatures, between 85 and 88 degrees Fahrenheit, are carefully attained, and the usual necessary requirements observed, so far there has been found little real danger associated with the procedure.

"Applied science has come to our assistance recently, and devised a refrigeration unit with blankets containing coiled tubing capable of temperature regulation, thermostatically controlled.

"It offers a wide variation of temperatures between 20 and 140 degrees fahrenheit. These units have seemed to offer prompt and favorable means by which patients' temperatures rapidly reduce from normal to desired low level.

"It has been found recently that less and less use of sedative drugs, like morphine, has been required as refrigeration controls pain and suffering to a most remarkable degree. In every instance relief of pain has been obtained."

Prof. Smith told of his discoveries that the "Arctic treatment" not only stopped the growth of the cancer cells but altered the activity of the liver, the master organ of the whole body.

THE SKY RAIDERS

by Paul Whelton
Staff Writer and World War Flyer

SIDE by side in the clearing they sleep in the forest of Sebastopol, where summer breezes nod the heads of yellow buttercups and winter winds mourn through the frost-sered grasses.

Side by side in their last sleep—the world-wise man of 3, soldier of fortune, restless rover, and the youth of 19, fresh from a sheltered home, the athletic field and the ancient halls of Harvard.

Mates in the air, Gervais Raoul Lufbery of Wallingford, Ct., and David Endicott Putnam of Newton and Brookline are forever mates in death—aces both.

Five Germans shot down in five minutes was the outstanding feat by David Putnam, one of whose forebears was the noted General Israel Putnam, the Connecticut farmer who left his plow to ride to Boston and the defense of Bunker Hill.

Once young David engaged, single-handed, 18 German Fokkers, shot down the leader and skillfully swiveled away—as he had swiveled through the position of old Claflin Field in the football days at Newtonville, now behind him.

One Boche he had conquered, 17 more in that battle he had outwitted, but in the end only eight Germans brought finale to that young life.

It has fallen to the lot of Austen Lake, Boston Evening American sports writer, to record the eyewitness story of his friend's passing.

In 1914 they met, when Putnam had brought his Newton High School hockey team to play Exeter and Dave had scored a goal on a hard, angular shot.

In mid-June of 1918, Lake had visited Putnam and his flight of Spad pursuit machines near Coucy-le-Chateau. Putnam had just been decorated for his 10th official victory, an enemy bomber downed in flames, and had been presented another decoration.

"It is September 12 of 1918," Lake records in telling of Putnam's last hour, 'and a Polish-American corporal and I are tramping down a winding road near the ruined town of Limy.

"It is crisp autumn, full of sunlight that blesses the scarred hillsides where only yesterday the American army had blasted through the St. Mihiel sector and squeezed the enemy in its huge pincers.

"Our shoulder packs are heavy and for a spell we sprawl on the roadside and use our loads for comforting cushions.

"High above the shattered town, where the once trim farmhouses are piles of rubbish, a combat patrol of German planes is circling and soaring with the lazy impudence of buzzards.

"WHITE puffs dot the sky like little balls of cotton, as aircraft batteries range the distance. And the corporal has rolled a cigarette with a deft twist of stained fingers and sneers that our flyers must have gone to lunch.

"But now from the horizon, low against the purple hills, come two tiny specks, looming gradually into planes with colored bull'seyes on their lower wings. One throttles down to a snail's pace, loath to challenge such an overwhelming force.

"But the other climbs steeply, sailing in a headlong rush that carries him into the middle of a wild whirlpool. And on the instant the sky is filled with the sound of a thousand hornets and the constant stutter of machine guns as the planes dive and twist.

"Suddenly one of the buzzards swoops sharply, falling like a leaf in quickening spins and flutters, a plume of dark smoke trailing from its tail. There are licks of flame on the fuselage as it slides beyond the neighboring woods, where the smudge turns to a yellowish vapor that spirals above the trees.

"And quite as suddenly now, the plane with the colored bullseyes noses down, diving steeply and followed closely by one of the buzzard flock with its guns blazing and its motor screaming.

"For a moment the American levels off and then descends in a long sweeping spiral so that we can hear the shrill shriek of the wind in his wires as he comes roaring over our heads.

"It is a crescendo of sound that ends with a stunning impact as it crashes against a hillside les than 50 yards away.

"And through the cloud of dust I can see the tail of the stricken plane settle gradually back from its wings in a tired, lazy sag as though it were lying down to rest.

"We ran, the corporal and I, and unstrapped the heroic American from his shattered plane, laying down his limp figure in its fleecy woolens tat he will need no more. There are goggles on his eyes and a fur helmet close about his cheeks.

"It is the Polish corporal who fishes for the silver identification bracelet, peering down as he reads.

"'It's a guy," said he, 'named David Putnam.'"

Eight Fokkers there were in that enemy patrol—8 to 1 the odds against Dave Putnam of Newton and Brookline, but there were only seven left when he scored his 12th official victory before he himself fell.

With full military honors he was buried in the glade in the forest of Sebastopol, near Toul, beside the great Lufbery whom Putnam had succeeded as the American Aces of Aces.

DAVE PUTNAM would have been 20 years old had he lived until December 10th of that year.

Son of Frederick Huntington and Janet Hallowell Putnam, he was born in 1898 in Jamaica Plain, but moved as a boy to Newton and attended Newton High School, being graduated with the class of 1916.

In high school he was captain of the hockey team, was a regular on the late Coach Allie Dickinson's winning football teams and was active on the track.

Late in 1916, a few months after entering Harvard, Putnam passed the examination for the United States aviation service, then the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, but was rejected because of his youth.

Studies meant little to him after that, although he passed his Harvard mid-year examinations and moved on toward spring. But in March he decided he could wait no longer.

To his mother, who then had moved to Brookline, the student confided his decision to go overseas and enlist with the French. She did not stop the stocky square-jawed youth.

On a cattle boat he worked his passage to France, enlisted in the Lafayette Flying Corp in April, 1917, and began his training at Avord, where he was breveted, or licensed on the Caudron machine on Oct. 17 and sent to Pau for training in acrobatics.

On Dec. 21, just 11 days after his 19th birthday, he was sent to the front, assigned to Escadrille N. 156, stationed then outside of Chalons, near the Marne river. The following day Putnam made his initial flight over the lines, but the sector was quiet and there was no action for the fledgling.

During January, young Putnam was given a Morane Parasol machine, smallest, fastest and trickiest of all chasse planes, and on January 19 he brought down his first Boche—the only flyer up to then who ever had shot down a Boche from one of these little hornets.

With Wallace Charles (Wally) Winter of Chicago, a classmate at Avord, Putnam took off in the teeth of a high wind that day, and the two swift dragon flys headed over the lines.

Higher an dhigher for the ceiling the tricky Morano Parasols pointed, with the wind drifting them over the enemy's territory, until the two Americans sighted two Boche below and making for the French lines.

A hair's pressure on the sensitive control stick and Putnam was shrieking down on the Germans, with Winter in his wake, the tiny Parasols two black streaks against the sky.

From 2000 yards Putnam began to fire the twin guns in front of him and along the pencil-lines of tracer smoke he raced until the Boche upon whom he had fixed slid off, turned over and went down out of control.

Then Putnam was past the second Boche with the momentum of his dive and bullets were ripping through the Morane as the German dived after.

Winter arrived on the tail of the German Fokker and the Boche shot up in an Immelmann as Putnam went into a reversement and began to climb. Now the German was under Winter's tail and was opening a seam in the Chicagoan's machine, that deadly seam which, running up to the cockpit, spells death.

ROCKETING his flimsy craft back into the fray, Putnam rained lead on the Boche, who immediately went into a power dive and fled back for his own lines.

"Wally saved my life," reported Putnam when he and his companion had returned to the field.

"Dave saved my life," reported Winter, who was to be killed in combat less than two months later.

No. 2 Boche was scored for the Newton flyer on the afternoon of March 14, 1918, when, patroling alone over the lines, he attacked three Albatros machines, bringing down one and putting the others to rout.

On the following day he engaged a pair of German two-seaters, shooting down one in flames but losing the other because it fled far back into its own territory.

It was especially forbidden by the squadron commander that pilots should continue the practice of pursuing far behind the enemy lines, and particularly were the new pilots warned against doing any chasse libre.

Like a great many new flyers, however, Putnam sometimes forgot those instructions and sailed boldly over the lines far into the territory occupied by the Germans, to provoke battle, usually when the Boche appeared afraid to venture out over the lines.

In consequence, a number of victories secured by Dave could not be confirmed, and twice at this stage he had to glide back over the lines and explain why his motor was out of commission and his machine shot up when no fight had been reported over territory considered by the commander as within bounds.

On April 11 he had one of his longest and toughest air battles when he engaged four German two-seaters for 35 minutes, finally bringing down one of them.

The following day he flung himself blithely into combat with a Fokker circus of eight machines, shot down two and was away himself unscathed but with his machine well riddled.

Three more Boche fell before his deadly guns 11 days later, and on April 23, 1918, he was awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French government, first of many honors, and declared an ace with six official victories to his credit.

SINCE March 14, Putnam had been flying with Escadrille Spad 38, and much of his skill in air tactics and aerobatics had been picked up under instruction of the squadron commander, Lieut. Georges Madon, who was to finish the war and more than four years of action as a captain with 41 enemy craft to his credit.

What Madon had learned from grim experience he attempted to teach all pilots in his charge, and Putnam was his most adept pupil.

Thus, on June 5, 1918, when Putnam fought his most momentous battle in the sky, amazing his fellow allied flyers and confounding the Germans, what Madon had taught him stood him in excellent stead.

Patroling alone while the Second Battle of the Marne raged below him, Putnam was dived upon by 10 German Albatros machines. Where another would have sought safety in speedy flight from such an overpowering weight of numbers, Putnam thrust out that lower jaw and accepted the challenge.

It was an amazing show from the ground for half an hour. With the eye and skill he had used on the ice while carrying a puck, Putnam twisted, turned, swiveled, dived and rolled, picking a hole here, reversing, firing a burst, ducking, pressing his triggers, darting away and slashing back again.

One Fokker fell, another and another—until five had been shot down out of the flight, the greatest score of victories ever credited to a flyer in one engagement.

After such a feat, many lads would be content to sit back awhile and take things easy.

Nine days afterward he was at it again, and on June 16, 1918, he wrote home:

"Combat after combat comes my way, and without boasting I'll say that I generally meet them head on.

"Friday, with another fellow, I dove into a bunch of six Germans and three fell. These are not official yet.

"Yesterday I was with three other fellows when I saw two Boche biplanes. They saw us at about the same time and started to drive for home.

"Putting on all the speed I could, I gave chase. As my machine happened to be slightly faster than the others of my patrol, I arrived first.

"With both guns shooting murder, I slowly closed with one of the Boches. Nearer and nearer I drew. One gun stuck, but the other rattled on. When I was about 10 yards from the German, up came his nose. A perfect target, and just at that moment my remaining gun stopped.

"THE German gunner (I could see him clearly) took one look at me and commenced to fire. A quick turn and I was out of range. I looked back and there was the unlucky Boche falling. Suddenly his left wing broke off and he dashed into the ground.

"I looked for the rest of my patrol, and there they were, some 500 yards above me, watching the fight. We got together again and started to patrol some more. I kept on, for I was able to fix my guns, which weren't very badly jammed.

"Suddenly I saw five more Germans and gave chase immediately. As the biplanes had done before them, they too turned toward home, and in following them I passed through a cloud and lost the rest of my patrol. The Germans, however, went so far that I turned back. I had flown perhaps three minutes toward our lines when a German balloon loomed up directly ahead of me.

"'Well,' I said, 'I've got no incendiary bullets, but there's no harm in shooting at it.'

"No sooner said than done. I pulled both triggers. Pfoof!!! The balloon did burst into flames, and it did look queer. I supposed that there would be just one burst of flame and that would be the end. No—the thing remained in the air, a flaming mass, for perhaps 20 seconds, and then dropped slowly to the ground where it continued to burn.

"But how the anti-aircraft guns did shoot at me. Bang! Bang! Just a continuous roar.

"Flaming onions also were coming up from the ground. Into a cloud I went. The shooting was even more terrible there, so out I dove. Twisting, turning, circling, I finally reached our lines and made tracks for home.

"The others arrived at about the same time, having witnessed the entire performance."

On June 10, 1918, when Putnam transferred to the American service, he was commissioned first lieutenant and two weeks later was assigned to command the 134th Pursuit Squadron—a youth only 19 years old.

As commander he brought down five more planes before the fatal 12th of September, when he made his last flight.

Putnam was dead before he reached the earth, shot twice through the heart.

(He was the King of the Air and he led a charmed life. Tomorrow—France's Rene Fonck, the most skillful of the aerial duelists.)

RENO Rendezvous

by LESLIE FORD

MY FACE was burning; it was also, I have no doubt, a study in bewilderment.

Bill Hogan turned to me, puzzled and disturbed.

"Mrs. Latham," he said, "do you recognize those hairs?"

"I . . . yes," I said. "I do.—If they're the ones somebody took out of the pocket of my riding shirt."

"They are," Colonel Primrose said suavely. "I took them out myself—Sergeant Buck witnessing—while you were down in the Washoe Bar."

I had a sudden most embarrassing picture of that large figure in the buckaroo costume, stony-visaged and fishy-eyed, in my bathroom. I should imagine—to say the least—that it's not at all military to shower bath powder and towels around the way I do.

Sergt. Buck stood motionless and frozen-faced by the door, not bothering to give any sign or corroboration. Obviously his Colonel's word needed no bush . . . though the figure is certainly not very apt unless there's some particularly thorny and rock-ribbed shrub that I don't know about.

"And where did you get them, Mrs. Latham?" Hogan asked quietly.

"I took them out of Cromwell's hand, on the steering wheel of the car, when Colonel Primrose went to call you," I said.

"Did they come out easily?"

I was more bewildered than ever. "Not . . . terribly."

"They came," Colonel Primrose said quietly, "if they had really been clutched by his hand before rigor set in, they wouldn't have come. They would have broken off. However, I think that apart from that, your jury would accept my testimony that of those hairs in his hand, as I saw plainly the first thing, only two had a root showing. The roots of the others—which at first I assumed had got broken off some way—were turned in the other direction . . . toward the windshield. They were put under his hand, of course, by somebody who didn't notice that small detail."

Hogan turned to the garage man. "You sure you recognized Mrs. Bonner's voice when the call came through?" he asked sharply.

Mr. Nelson hesitated.

"If she hadn't said she was Mrs. Bonner," Col. Primrose said quietly, "would you have known it was she?"

A WHISPERING VOICE

There was a doubtful note in Mr. Nelson's voice. "I don't know, for sure, when you put it like that. I was figuring she was at a party, like she said. She was talking low . . . whispering. I guess she didn't want any of 'em——"

Bill Hogan and Col. Primrose exchanged one glance.

"H—," Hogan said, "why didn't you say so? If there's anything about crime everybody knows more about than fingerprints, it's that one whispering voice sounds just like another. You can't even tell what kind of a voice it is, if they're whispering.

He sat there for a while, staring silently down at his desk, after Mr. Nelson had been dismissed. He turned abruptly to Colonel Primrose.

"This puts a different face on things," he said curtly. He hesitated again. "I guess you're right, Colonel. Go on with it, will you? I'll be over to the Washoe in ten minutes."

He turned back, picked up a stack of papers and began sorting them. As I started to follow Colonel Primrose out I saw one that caught my eye. It was a radiogram. I couldn't possibly have read it, but I saw the signature: "de Courcey." I looked at Colonel Primrose, reflecting that friendships, apparently, were playing no part in this affair.

A policeman came into the middle room as we went through and said, "Okay, Ewing—you're next," and I heard some one say, "That bird's up for a good stretch for extortion," just as Mr. Hogan's door closed again . . . and that was the last I ever heard of Mr. Steve Ewing.

As I drew up in front of the Washoe I saw the Colonel's car—Sergt. Buck's car, rather—stop in front of the porticoed county court house across the street. Both of them went up the broad stairs and disappeared inside.

I went up to my room. Judy wasn't back yet. I went into her sitting room, sat down on the sofa and lighted a cigarette, thinking with an almost unbearable weariness of the strange business of her car, and of what Colonel Primrose had said over at police headquarters, and wondering if he had meant it, really . . . and if so, where were we then, and who did he think had killed Cromwell and Vicki Ray?

I didn't dare to think about the point that ached in my heart, hurting more than any of that . . . the thing the China boy at the Tahoe cottage had said about Judy Bonner and Dex.

Whatever the business of those bright hairs, that anyway was true, and there was no getting around it. And the fact that it had made no change, apparently in Col. Primrose's conviction of Judy's innocense—in the killing of Dex Cromwell—was just the more disturbing to me.

I tried painfully to think in some kind of an ordered way. That Judy Bonner had planned coldbloodedly to kill Cromwell, and after doing it had kept all the evidence where it was bound to do her the most harm, didn't make sense.

I got up and stepped out onto the balcony above the Truckee, thinking about the miner's candle holder and the soiled riding shirt, and how they could have been got into Judy's room after Cromwell had been killed, and for that matter how someone could have got in there to put in that call to Mr. Nelson for her car at 1:30 Tuesday morning . . . and thinking too that Mr. Steve Ewing's balcony was too far off for him to have scrambled over, unless Mr. Ewing had considerably more brawn [illegible] than he'd appeared to have the last time I saw him.

A CLUE!

Then I stopped short as a scene in the lobby the first night I came flashed into my mind: Judy handing Dexter Cromwell her key and asking him to go back to the third floor for her jacket.

I don't know how long I'd been standing out there on the balcony, thinking about that, looking absently down into the Truckee, when I heard a voice, frightened and hysterical. It was coming from the open window to my left, beyond the fire escape.

"But I was so, hideously worried!" Mrs. de Courcey was crying. "You know what he's like, John! He hasn't a warm drop of blood in his body! I knew if he found I'd been giving anybody money he'd hold up the settlement instantly, and if that stupid, unforgivable affair with Cromwell years ago came out—even if there wasn't anything in it—he'd file countersuit and I wouldn't have got a penny. I was almost out of my mind, John! And Vicki knew it.—But I've got the settlement now, and I'm a rich woman . . . Can't you just forget—"

I stepped back into Judy's room, sat down weakly. For a moment I thought the whole thing was clear in my mind. Or could it be possible that Mrs. de Courcey . . .? I thought about how she'd known Dex Cromwell was dead, when she came in that night, and her sidelong glance without so much as batting an eye at that blood-stained candle holder, and all the elaborate nonsense about how someone could get into Judy's room to plant the evidence against her, and that sudden change in her manner when she stepped out on the balcony and saw that Steve Ewing was in his room . . . Mary De Courcey . . . desperate, lonely, unnecessary—as she'd put it herself—even for appearances.

I got up suddenly. I knew he was coming in to see me, and I didn't want him to find me there, for he'd know from my face, instantly, that I'd heard them. I picked up Judy's car keys and put on my hat, and started for the door. Just as I did, the telephone rang in my own room.

It was Wu Lung, the China boy at Dexter Cromwell's cottage up at Tahoe.

"Missy Latham? This Wu Lung," he repeated patiently. "Missy Latham? This Wu Lung.—Missy Bonner, he want you come light away, he have velly bad accident."

After the first instant it took me no time at all to hear the authentic note in that high, cheerful, singsong voice; but it was a full long moment before I realized that he didn't mean Clem and he did mean Judy.

"You come light away," he said, and hung up.

I think the one thing I've learned from all the broken collar bones and arms and legs from football and the concussions from falling off horses that my young seem constantly to meet up with, is not to work myself into a state of hysteria before I arrive on the scene. Nevertheless, I don't think I ever got out of a room and downstairs into the lobby of any hotel as fast as I did just then.

"WHERE'S JUDY?"

"I don't have any clear recollection now of that second trip up Mt. Rose, except that I made it, lurching and skidding, in what seemed an age-long time, and was considerably less than I'd ever dare do it again . . . knowing how Death rode up there with me, silent and hollow-eyed at my side, and maybe even smiling as we got out of the car together by the corral behind the chalet, gleaming white against the sapphire blue of the mountain-girdled lake.

I hurried across the grass and the red-tiled terrace. The door was open, but nobody was in the pine-panelled room. But in another room I could hear Wu Lung's high-pitched voice.

I called "Judy! Judy!" and ran across the room, through the door by the rock fireplace.

"Where's Judy?" I cried. "What's happened to her?"

I was really and genuinely alarmed now.

She shrugged her shoulders casually.

"It's just that hysterical Chinaman. She's gone back to Reno—you must have passed her. Did you come by Truckee?"

I sank down in a chair and dropped my hat on the floor, a great wave of relief relaxing my taut muscles.

"I came up Mount Rose," I said. "He said she'd had a bad accident."

"Are you SURE she's all right, Kaye?" I asked quietly.

"Oh, don't be silly. She just went off the road and got scared—that's all."

Her voice was perfectly casual and matter-of-fact . . . but something in the atmosphere so tense and alive and . . . wrong that I could almost feel it touching me made every note and fibre of my body suddenly taut and aware. I picked up my hat, moved to the edge of my chair and stopped, startled by the sudden jangling of the phone on the low table.

She made no move to answer it, but just sat looking at me. It rang again, urgently. She still made no move.

"Are you going to answer that?" I asked practically. "Or shall I?"

A curious smile curled in two lines at the end of her soft red mouth. The phone rang again, a long long time. She sat there, looking strangely at me, her eyes intent and searching. And then, as if she'd been making up her mind, and preparing in some way, and was ready now, her white hand with its long scarlet lacquered nails and a great star ruby on one finger, crept out and took up the phone.

And I heard—incredibly—Wu Lung's high-pitched sing-song voice coming from her heavily rouged lips:

"Hello. No—Missy Latham he come, but he go. He all time tly find Missy Bonner. Missy Bonner he gone long time, he gone Lene. Velly okay."

And I just sat there, staring like some newly made petrifaction, unable to believe my ears.

"That was your friend, Col. Primrose," she said. "It's too bad, too. He's just down at State Line—I heard the operator."

My heart gave a quick leap, and died again, as I began to realize, in some kind of an unconscious way, bewildered and frightened, what this meant.

I said—and I was vaguely conscious of being surprised that my voice should sound perfectly normal—:Are you mad, Kay Gorman?"

A queer light, frightened and angry, flickered for an instant in her big blue eyes. "No, I'm not. I'm just not taking any more chances with you, Mrs. Latham."

Then I started to get up—just thinking, I suppose, in my simple way, that I'd had enough of this and I might as well leave. There was a sudden hardening of Kaye Gorman's smooth face and a sudden movement of her hand. I stopped, staring at the small blue revolver she held resting on her knee.

"Sit down," she said.

I sat. I don't think it occurred to me to do anything else.

"And don't act like a fool. I want to know how many people you've told."

THE KILLER

I suppose it would sound ridiculous to say that I wasn't afraid, then, when I was . . . afraid with a deeper, more profound fear than I've ever known it was possible to feel. But in some queer way I wasn't actually immediately aware of it, unless of course I was so aware of it that I was totally numbed.

"Told . . . what?

Her eyes narrowed sharply, her face flushed a hot angry red. She uncurled from her seat on the sofa and got abruptly to her feet.

"Look here, Mrs. Latham—if you think being funny, or stupid, is going to help you, you're wrong.

"One more life's nothing to me . . ."

And then, as it dawned on me, and I understood, in a way, without understanding why or how, I stared at her so utterly and I suppose so obviously dumbfounded, that she stood there for an instant, completely rigid, as if some violent electric shock had rooted her speechless to the rug.

The blue muzzle in her hands wavered as she took a step toward me, her face perfectly ashen.

"You mean you didn't know I killed Dex Cromwell and Vicki?"

Each word dropped separate and distinct from her lips, not made of sound but of fear, tangible and distilled, as if all other quality had gone and only that was left.

Suddenly her body stiffened. She shot forward, her eyes burning into mine like hard, blue coals.

"You're lying!" she whispered. "You're trying to fool me again!"

I whispered, too: "Again?"

"Yes, again. I let you fool me once into thinking you HAD made a mistake; you really did think it was me, not Vicki, with that dress—not because you're clever, Grace Latham, but because I couldn't figure out how you could have seen me . . . not till last night, and I sat at the table you were at and saw you could see the door of the powder room through the little glass at the top . . . That's when I knew you'd seen me . . . and that's what you meant when you screamed 'It's Kaye Gorman!' "

I made a supreme attempt to control my nerves and my voice.

"Listen," I said. "You're absolutely crazy. I hadn't the faintest idea it was you—it's nothing but your guilty conscience that's making you read all that into what I said."

"You mean—Vicki hadn't told you that Dex told her all about a girl who lived at Tucker's while he was here before? Oh, he didn't mention her name, but Vicki put two and two together and made four. You mean she didn't tell you that?"

And quite suddenly I remembered Vicki in the hotel room, just before Colonel Primrose came in, saying, "Did somebody ever tell you a story, not mentioning names, but so you can put two and two together?"

She looked down at the revolver in her hand.

I shook my head, but it was too late.

"I don't believe you, Mrs. Latham—she told some one. She told me she had, so she'd be safe, she said."

I know I had the desperate vague idea that I ought to go on talking, to keep her talking, if I could.

"I still don't know why you did it . . . were you in love with Dexter Cromwell?"

CLARK GABLE
"The Right Face"

King Carol, he says, should grow a "cookie-duster" like Actor Errol Flynn. King George might emulate Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. And Chamberlain could take a lesson from conservative Lewis Stone.

Westmore would shave off Stalin's brush-like mustache and replace it with one similar to Clark Gable's.

For Hitler, he recommends the style made famous by Adolph Menjou.

There is a slim possibility that the above-mentioned Europeans might take the Westmore recommendations seriously and become so concerned with their newly acquired "glamour" that they would have no time to think about imperialism and warfare.

But the possibility is exceedingly remote, for if the past can be considered a guide to human nature, a leader's appearance has little to do with the quality of his statesmanship.

Alexander the Great, one of the most ambitious conquerors of all time, had a face as smooth as a woman's.

On the other hand, Genghis Khan, supreme and blood-thirsty ruler of the Mongol hordes, was full-bearded.

George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin shaved as frequently as Alexander the Great without acquiring any of his viciousness.

JOSEPH STALIN
"The Wrong Face"

As the late Arthur Brisbane often and wisely observed, what counts is the material inside of the head; physical perfection on the outside is seldom important.

THE HAM AND EGGS PLAN, which comes before the voters of California in a special election on November 7, is denounced with hearty unanimity by men who normally are strongly opposed on economic or political issues.

The National Administration, which is often at odds with business in matters of taxation and regulation, unites with its business opponents in declaring the Ham and Eggs measure to be impractical, dangerous and certain to lead us into financial chaos.

Upton Sinclair, the Socialist propagandist, who all his life has assailed the economic policies of the Chamber of Commerce, finds himself in thorough agreement with his pet bogey and vigorously attacks the Pied Pipers of Ham and Eggs.

And so on down the line, until the only division seems to be between experienced, responsible and intelligent people on one side, and inexperienced, irresponsible and unintelligent people on the other.

When bankers and Socialists, sincere conservatives and sincere radicals, join spontaneously in defense against a single economic proposition, it is obvious to even the least informed that this proposition is unsound, hazardous and utterly devoid of sense.

The question is no longer whether people over 50 shall be given a pension in the shape of printed pieces of paper which merely obligate them to spend $1.04 in order to get one dollar.

The question is now whether California shall remain a growing and prosperous State governing itself by the principles of democracy, or whether California shall be disrupted and impoverished under a dictatorship.

Human Side of News -:- By EDWIN C. HILL

I HAVE permission from a friend to publish a letter from an American woman in Geneva. The letter impresses because of its bearing on our orientation toward the Europe of today, and is therefore reproduced, in part:

"Even before these days of fear and tension, I had a strange feeling that we were living on another planet. I tell myself time and again that the one hope for civilization is for greater unity and co-operation among the nations, but at last I face the realization that it is much more than an ocean which divides us from Europe.

"And before I explain do not think I am grossly insensitive to this appalling tragedy here, or that I am complacently contrasting it with our own well-being. It isn't that. It is merely my feeling that here is an alien world, and that the only thing we can do for it is to take care of ourselves.

"THE OTHER DAY at Mme. ———'s salon there was talk of Metternich. A diplomat sketched in the picture of political intrigue of that day, the reforming of the power groups after the Napoleonic wars and the general shaping and alignments of European diplomacy during the nineteenth century. It was an able, informed and brilliant summary.

"The general conversation brought it down to the European political line-up of today. For some reason which was not quite clear at the moment, it made me uncomfortable, but it all became clear that night when John said to me: 'I wonder if you felt, as I did, that Europe hasn't changed a whit since the day of Metternich.'

EDWIN C. HILL
Letter Bares Europe's Trouble

"We had this in mind in the later dinner conversations with various diplomatic representatives or embassy attaches of several nations. They made us feel provincial, indeed, but they also gave us our first clear realization that European politics is a game as specialized as contract bridge and as little concerned with basic human concerns of masses of people.

"In these diplomatic circles you rarely hear a reference to such political abstractions as democracy or absolutism. These people are not hard, brutal or cynical. They are civilized and humane. But such safety and stability as they have enjoyed in between their wars have been maintained only by the hard concretions of power politics, and not by political ideals.

"THE GUIDES and motivations of their lives seem to point farther and farther back into the dark centuries. They are burdened with a past from which we miraculously escaped. There is no talk of this "way of life" against some other way,' no statement of the European problem of today that isn't immediately resolved into its elements of force

"Heaven knows we at home have enough to worry about. But how free and strong and purposeful our country seems when you get in the thick of things here. I believe Providence was saving us when we escaped from all this. I hope you agree with me that we should keep out of it."

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

FT. WORTH, Tex., Nov. 3—Before we left the train in Oklahoma City we saw a newspaper which carried a most amusing account, written by a reporter who acted as though he were a detective describing his day's efforts in extracting the information concerning the time of my arrival in Oklahoma City.

It always seems a little unfair on these lecture trips to tell people every detail of your plans so far ahead that they feel obligated to look after you and try to do something for you.

If no one is quite sure until the last minute, except the sponsors of the lecture, then the plans are left entirely to them, as they should be.

We were greeted on arrival by some members of the Altrusa Club, and after getting settled at the hotel we went down with them to lunch. It was interesting to find myself again with this group, which seems to attract particularly active business women. They made their regular business reports, and I was struck by the useful work they are doing.

ONE COMMITTEE was arranging a series of six discussions and talks for young working girls, at which their problems will be discussed and advice given by experienced women who have already established themselves in some business or profession.

Another committee chairman reported on the work done to help older women who have to go to work in middle life with comparatively little training. The particular procedure they follow originated in Dallas, with the Altrusa group there.

FIRST LADY VISITS "TENANTS" OF UNCLE SAM
Lauds Success of Government Projects in South

The chairman told the story of a woman who wanted employment in an office, but who after careful interviewing was found to be primarily interested in sewing for her own home.

A number of people had her make slipcovers and drapes for them, and she made such a name for herself that one of the big shops in the city in which she lived finally employed her. She was able to save her home, which was her main reason for wanting work.

The third report dealt with a project which might be termed pure charity. The support of a room in the home for unmarried mothers.

After a press conference the WPA and NYA representatives came to see me.

ON THE TRAIN a gentleman spoke to me who is connected with the training of Indian boys in their CCC camps. Some 7000 of them are doing soil conservation work. The representatives of the WPA Administration presented me with some beautiful work done by their Indian girls' project.

This project has meant a revival of the old Indian crafts, and the young people are being taught by the older people. The belt which was given me is of exquisite workmanship and shows how much skill can be developed in our native Indian groups.

"NO MORE GARDENIAS," WHALEN VOWS

SIGHT: The clippings of the Washington visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth include reports of sightseeing trips through the entire District and the vicinity—but no mention ever was made of their having seen the Lincoln Memorial... As a matter of fact, their Majesties did see the Lincoln Memorial—at 2:30 a. m., long after the capital was asleep . . . They didn't want the President to climb the many steps, and so, after midnight they went there accompanied by their guards . . . The watchman at first refused to turn on the lights, even after he was told who the visitors were . . . "I can't do it," he informed, "without authority" . . . He called the proper official, related the facts and was assured that it was all right to turn on the lights for the King and Queen.

ANXIETY: Opponents of a third term for Roosevelt have placed much store by the declarations of Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, that she is opposed to a third term... What isn't generally known is the fact that the venerable lady was opposed even to a first term, feeling that the worries attendant upon the office always have aged the occupant.

WAR: They're now telling of four Britishers who were called before the army officials. The first begged off, because of a bad heart... The second asked to be excused from the service because he had a broken leg ... The third claimed exemption because he had a wife and five children to support... The fourth, however, said: "Get me a gun and put me in the front lines right away. I don't care if they kill me. Just give me a gun—and put me right in the first trench"... "Congratulations, my good man," said the officer, "you'll go immediately" ... "Immediately?" the man said. "Say—don't you even think I'm crazy?"

HARRY MARSHARD at the Balinese Room greeted the company of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" with a number entitled "We Can (or can't) Live on Love" . . . This was not an intentional wise-crack to music about the slim business being done by the show . . . Producer Brock Pemberton and Antoinette Perry, his partner and director, arrived in town last night . . . They saw the show and ordered a program of rehearsals . . . One of the solid hits of last year, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" suffered in its Boston engagement by repeated playing in neighboring summer theaters . . . Phil Ober's performance is said to be excellent, and Elizabeth Love, who had never seen the original show in New York before she opened in Boston, has conquered her role after an ineffective premiere performance

POLICE COMMISSIONER Joseph F. Timilty saw his first nightclub revue last night since his return from the coast . . . He was a ringsider at the Cocoanut Grove after questioning the two youths charged with planning a Dorchester bank robbery.

TWO WEEKS AGO, the commissioner was honor-guest at a birthday party in another Cocoanut Grove, the one in Los Angeles . . . Jimmy Roosevelt "threw" the party and Hedy La Marr and Carol Lombard were among those present . . . The Boston police boss danced with both, and liked Miss Lombard the more . . . Charles W. Koerner, former division head for Keith's in New England, was host at a Timilty party, too . . . Mr. Koerner has bought an $80,000 home in Beverly Hills . . . Yes, it has a swimming pool.

TOM WEATHERLY received a firm refusal from Tom Maren, proprietor of Dinty Moore's when Weatherly asked the restaurateur to post a tack-card advertising "Morning's at Seven" in Dinty's . . . Maren is a devoted friend of Mike Todd, producer of "The Hot Mikado," and nothing but Todd advertising will be permitted on the premises . . . Mr. Weatherly displays the same enterprise as a press-agent which he used to show as Dwight Deere Wiman's producing partner . . . There'll be cards advertising "Morning's at Seven" in the Mayfair, and that has never happened before . . . Incidentally, Wiman and his staff are convinced that they have a huge hit, and perhaps a Critics' Circle or Pulitzer winner in "Morning's at Seven" . . . They are saying little until the play opens . . . This is known as "opening a show on rubber heels."

THE TWENTY YEARS which Ward Morehouse, the New York columnist-dramatist, has lived with Broadway as his base of operations, are described engagingly in "Forty-Five Minutes Past Eight," just off the press . . . Stage-struck youngsters will find the book absorbing . . . Others who are close to the theater will re-live the most fascinating years of show-business, the lush 1920's and the thrifty '30's.

LONG-SHOT PLAYERS had a banner session at Narragansett yesterday not one of the favorites entering the winner's circle during the afternoon . . . It has not been a very good week for the form boys, but the long-shot putters have been happy.

JOHN BARRYMORE'S SON GETS FILM BID

By Louella O. Parsons

John Barrymore, 2d

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 3—I heard with interest today that RKO is moving heaven and earth to try to persuade Dolores Costello Barrymore to let her young son, John Barrymore, 2d, play Little Orvie in the Booth Tarkington story. A delightful story written as only Booth Tarkington can write of youth, it is a natural for a child. If it's a success, a series will be produced around the same character. Edward Ellis is set to play the garrulous grandfather and negotiations are far advanced for young John. Whether his father will consent has not been determined, but Dolores who has had the actual care and custody of the children, will probably do as she sees fit.

MARY HEALY

Speaking of John Sr., he continues to take the audience into his confidence on the Chicago stage in "My Dear Children" at each performance to the delight of everyone. That's what made the play run on and on. William Sistrom is the producer of "Little Orvie," and so far no director has been set, but it will be mighty interesting if John Barrymore, 2d, the third generation of this talented family, does make his movie debut.

DAILY STORY

Chalk Marks

MY WIFE and I were in our living room one evening. My wife, Mary, began to think of her sister, Anna, whom she hadn't seen for several years. Anna was a traveling companion for a wealthy old lady.

"Paul," said my wife, "I'm worried about Anna. I feel as though something has happened to her."

Suddenly, without anyone touching it, the dark green window shade in the room snapped up into the roller. My wife and I jumped from our chairs.

My wife ran to the window to see if anyone had deliberately pulled up the shade from the outside. But the window was closed.

She pulled down the shade, and noticed finger marks on the green surface—looking as though someone with chalk on his fingers had rubbed them on the shade.

"I can't account for these chalk-marks," my wife said. "I noticed how clean the shades were when I sat down. These marks weren't here before the shade flew up."

"Must have been a piece of chalk in the roller," I said, and dismissed the matter.

NEXT DAY my wife received a cablegram that her sister had been drowned within a small boat which had sunk off Cape Cod.

My wife endeavored to make arrangements for the return of her sister's body, but was told it would take several days because the boat was in eight fathoms of water. Divers had to be engaged to bring up the body of her sister and two other bodies in the boat.

But my wife finally got action, and later the body of her sister was shipped home under direction of a reliable undertaker.

When the coffin arrived, my wife asked the undertaker if it would be possible to open the casket so that she could have a last look at her dead sister.

AT FIRST the undertaker argued against it. But finally he agreed, warning my wife not to touch the body.

"By some strange chemical action," he said, "which happens only rarely in bodies found on the bottom of the sea, your sister's body has turned to chalk."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

SOMEBODY'S lying about you. Spreading a vicious, twisted story. Just enough facts in it, probably, to give a semblance of truth, but not actually one honest word.

And, of course, you're furious. You'd like to make her eat her words. Shame her before the public. That would end it all you're sure. But you're wrong. It wouldn't.

The silliest and most futile thing you can do with such a liar is to fight back. Deny the story, if you need to, to the two or three who are really concerned—though even that hardly pays. People who truly care for you won't believe it, anyway. Those who do believe it aren't worth bothering over.

But the best policy of all is—FORGET IT. Let the liar lie. Turn not only "the other cheek" but your whole back—and go your way.

BUT WHY—WHY?

Suppose you do contradict the story—what then? Do you think that will settle it? It won't. For you won't have touched the main issue at all. Why is the scandal-monger spreading that story? Because she believes it? NO. Because she has a grudge to settle? NO. Because she wants to hurt you? NO.

None of these motives animates the scandal-monger. She may or may not believe her own tale. She may or may not have a grudge against you. But neither of these angles concerns her. For she isn't interested in your guilt or innocence—nor in anything else about you.

THE SCANDAL-MONGER IS INTERESTED ONLY IN HERSELF. She is interested in some hunger or hurt deep inside herself. That hunger or hurt is the only real thing in life to her. She doesn't think of you. She hardly knows you exist. You do not exist, for her, except as a peg to hang her lie upon.

LET THE OTHER fellow lie. Let him rage and sneer and sling his mud.

Turn the other cheek! You've a job to do, a life to live, a trail to follow. There are fair things, and foul, on that trail. Sick things, and well. No matter where you go you'll bump into them. And, lacking a life of their own, they'll try to fatten on yours . . . try to feed their discontent on your pride and enthusiasm, your power and peace of mind.

Don't let them! Life's a big job, and you've just so much energy to spend upon it. Are you going to waste it, instead, fighting ticks and boll-weavils? Not if you're smart, kid. Forget it, TURN THE OTHER CHEEK—AND ON YOUR WAY!

MALDEN MOTHER MAKES STIRRING ANTI-WAR PLEA

Dramatic proof of the determination of New England women to prevent their husbands, sons and brothers from being sacrificed in foreign wars is contained in a letter received today from a Malden mother who joined the National League of Mothers of America.

The letter, from Mrs. Grace M. Brown Sholes of Cross st., reads:

"I could not go to sleep another night until I signed the pledge card, thus enrolling as a true American mother, who loves this glorious country of ours and will not consent to send our loved ones to fight on foreign soil.

"I cannot convey my deep appreciation of this grand organization. We women must stand together to support an adequate national defense and to put a definite stop to Communism in our great country. We must not allow our American form of government to be destroyed.

"God bless the patriotic spirit of the women of New England. I am enclosing eight pledge cards, and will go out and enroll every American woman I can in support, and work for this great humanitarian and patriotic [redacted]

"This is our country and we love it, and must and will fight for it to keep it out of war, and pledge ourselves not to let our loved ones go to any foreign country to fight. I pledge myself to support this National Legion of Mothers of America with all my heart, in every way I possibly can.

"God bless America. God bless the National Legion of Mothers of America. I am glad to be one of them."

1—To oppose the sending of American soldiers to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a strong program for adequate national defense.

3—To oppose all subversive groups, whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

The National Legion of Mothers program of activities will provide:

A medium through which American women may voice their opinion and indicate their stand on questions directly affecting the purposes of the organization.

To urge women to register and vote, but not to dictate to them how they shall vote.

To encourage women to study important public questions and form considered opinions thereon.

To hold group meetings for discussions, talks, etc.

It is a non-sectarian, non-political organization, open to all women who are American citizens, both married and single. You can become a member by sending your pledge card to Legion of Mothers Box 228, Boston, Mass. For further information call Liberty 4000

A Penny Spells Queen's Fortune

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Queen Elizabeth borrowed a penny today to try her luck on a "fortune for a penny" machine when visiting Queen Charlotte's Maternity Hospital. The needle spun around to a "happy marriage" and the queen laughed.

ALLIES ACCLAIM PASSAGE OF U. S. NEUTRALITY BILL

By the Associated Press

There was undisguised delight in Paris and London today over United States congressional action in voting to lift the arms embargo.

In Berlin an official spokesman said there would be no German government comment until the embargo actually was off the United States statute books.

A semi-official note issued after a French Cabinet session at which Premier Daladier was understood to have devoted much of his analysis of the situation to the prospects of buying equipment in the United States said the action of Congress "is regarded in Paris as an event of great material and moral importance."

"It is greeted with great satisfaction and homage is paid to the sense of fairness which inspired debate of the American Congress and the personal action of President Roosevelt," it said.

The note added that "France and Great Britain gain a definite advantage since mastery of the seas and their financial resources permit them alone, in fact, to take delivery in American ports of products they need.

"JUSTICE OF CAUSE"

"They also find immense moral satisfaction since the vote at Washington consecrated the justice of their cause."

The doom of the embargo—since only minor differences between the House and Senate were in the way of final action—was hailed as an allied victory and regarded as the most important news of the day in London and Paris newspapers.

Paris-Soir said the "ability to increase their armaments rapidly is an important advantage to the Allies. That is a consequence of the law which the United States foresaw and accepted. They are neutral in fact. They are not neutral in thought."

The newspaper L'Intransigeant, however, cautioned that France must pay cash for American arms.

"We should fall back on American manufacture only in a prudent and limited way," the paper said. "Let's not find a pretext for laziness and slowness in facilities we are obtaining on the other side of the Atlantic."

Officials and the press in Britain showed obvious though restrained delight over the apparent certainty of repeal of the embargo.

One spokesman smilingly commented, however, "Our soul is full of hope, but we don't want to count our chickens before they are hatched."

The Evening Star had a line across the front page "First U. S. arms cargo on Monday." The Mirror's top headline was "The United States does it" and the News-Chronicle's "United States finally approved arms ban repeal."

SLOGAN RENEWAL

In Paris, the newspaper Excelsior saw the step as a renewal of the American World War slogan, "Lafayette, we are here," although it stressed that the inference was not to be drawn that "the United States is entering with us in battle."

"We demand no more," it explained, "than the right to buy supplies in the United States and transport them to France in French ships."

Le Petit Parisien looked on the day as one to be marked with a white stone—France's equivalent of a red letter day.

"Free America has vibrated for a just cause," it said. "To moral support already so precious, will come . . . soon material support which will hasten the hour of victory."

Ready for Arms Law

nection with the demand of Rep. John W. McCormack (D.) of Massachusetts that the American ambassador be recalled from Russia.

PLEASED WITH VICTORY

This was the only comment the President would make on the controversy which has been raging between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Shipments of arms to Europe's warring nations—now banned under the present neutrality law may be started some time this week-end by foreign vessels. American craft are barred from carrying arms and ammunition to belligerents.

The President said he was very much gratified by the majority given his neutrality program in the House. The President's program received a majority of 62 votes in the House when the lower branch of Congress defeated an attempt to have the neutrality bill rewritten to keep the present arms embargo.

Anticipating that he will be able to draft his several proclamations and sign the bill by tomorrow, the President plans to thereupon leave for Hyde Park, where he will remain over the Tuesday elections.

HOPES LEADERS REMAIN

He said that although he had made no new request since the special session first assembled, it was his hope that Congressional leaders would stay in Washington or be handy during the interim before the January session.

The President scoffed at the possibility 80 German vessels now in American ports might engage in inter-American commerce under the new neutrality law in competition with American shipping.

Activity of the German freighter Haviland was cited to the President, but he explained that the vessel had been carrying a cargo of copra and was merely discharging what she could of her cargo.

The President waved as "iffy" questions all inquiries concerning anticipated return of the German vessels to their home ports through the war zone.

U. S. 'Arsenal' For England

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Supply Minister Leslie Burgin declared today that congressional action toward lifting the arms embargo transformed the United States into "an arsenal of unlimited resources" for Great Britain.

Burgin is responsible for providing for every material need of the British fighting forces.

He said Britain probably would buy machine tools, raw materials, gun steel "and ultimately ammunition" in the United States.

Some Sprinter for 'Cripple!'

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—A bent man of halting gait and decrepit appearance shuffled up to the automobile in which Detective L. C. Williams was sitting and handed him a note that read:

"I was hurt in automobile wreck and had the misfortune of losing my right arm and my right leg was broken and I lost the sight of my left eye."

Williams stepped from the car and the beggar fled so swiftly it was all a motorcycle policeman could do to overtake him. The man was neither blamed nor a cripple.

Governor Warns Of 'Death Months'

Warning that the "death months" of November and December may cost an estimated 14h fatalities on the highways, Gov. Saltonstall today urged motorists to co-operate by conditioning their driving to suit dangerous conditions.

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness may be sacrificed by a single act of carelessness on the part of a motorist or pedestrian," he declared.

'Hague for President'

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 3 (AP)—Mayor Frank Hague was suggested today by Father Flanagan of Boys Town, Neb., for President of the United States.

With the Democratic national vice-chairman listening at a boys' club dedication ceremony last night, Msgr. Edward J. Flanagan spoke of the problem of wayward youth as the most difficult one facing society and asserted he felt Hague had the answer.

"Your mayor has a heart and a mind, and if what he is doing is good for America let us made [illegible] president," Father Flanagan said.

New England Leads Recovery Parade

New England is proving a wide awake leader of the recovery parade . . . Instead of smug contentment with recent gains the section is constantly on the alert for new opportunity . . . And that means the attraction of commerce-creating, employment-giving industries . . .

KNOWLEDGE . . . Of New England attributes, better climate, more highly skilled labor, superior popular intelligence, are not enough . . . If left to chance all too many concerns that could profitably locate here would miss out . . . On opportunity for themselves as well as New England . . . The obvious need of reliable statistical guides to speed industrial resettlement prompted the New England Council to insure compilation of complete records . . . In the form of a volume of Statistical Abstracts . . . Which the Boston University Bureau of Business Research was requested to compile . . . The second edition containing more complete comparative statistics in digest form is announced today . . .

SALIENT FEATURE . . . Of Statistical Abstracts is the addition of figures on 65 cities and towns to the 110 analyzed in the first edition published in 1937 . . . The volume was prepared under the direction of Professors Ralph G. Wells and John S. Perkins . . . The enormity of the work is best appreciated when it is realized the abstract of each of the 175 communities consists of two pages of social and economic information gathered from more than 70 sources . . . Information on retail sales, employment, population, municipal finances, types of products manufactured and a multitude of other pertinent facts . . . All useful in attracting new industry New Englandward . . .

• • •

PROMPT PAYMENT . . . Might well be the slogan of the Merchants Co-operative Bank of Boston . . . For Henry H. Pierce, president of the bank, New England's largest co-operative, tells us that on November first it completed payment of $163,955 in tax bills for its customers and itself . . . The large sum involved is largely attributed to customer use of the streamlined Merchants Co-operative Bank mortgage plan . . . Home owners now make a single payment each month which includes taxes, interest and monthly reduction of mortgage . . . With the result taxes are always paid practically up to the minute . . . Mr. Pierce says this method of tax payments is one of the achievements of which the Merchants is most proud . . .

• • •

STOCK PRICES . . . Continue to slide and slither around uncertainly . . . Some bulls are inclined to draw consolation from the failure of prices to travel very far on the downside . . . But common sense demands recognition of fact . . . And that means admitting that the tendency is down . . . A look at any chart tells the story . . . Volume has not been in evidence and that alone saves the situation . . . The October lows are now within close reach and if rail and industrial averages both penetrate them hopes of higher prices will be demolished for the time being at least . . . We would take a cautious view of proceedings until the future is less clouded . . .

HENRY H. PIERCE

INDUSTRY NEAR 1929 OUTPUT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (AP)—The Federal Reserve Board announced today that American industry was rolling out products at the fastest pace since 1929 and probably would continue at as rapid a gait until the end of the year at least.

At the same time, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins said that wholesale trade during the first nine months of the year aggregated $15,000,000,000, in increase of $1,000,000,000 over the corresponding period of 1938.

Figures from the Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce showed that half the wholesale gain was accounted for in July, August and September. September sales of wholesalers were 16½ per cent higher than in September, 1938.

The reserve board tempered its optimism with the comment that "unless there is considerable increase in the consumption of goods, the accumulation of inventories now under way is likely to reach substantial proportions."

This meant that, unless people and businesses buy and use up newly-produced goods faster than they now are doing, factories soon might reach the point of shutting down temporarily to get rid of all their present stocks.

However, moderate increases in retail sales and plant expansion, together with continued active residential construction, also were reported.

Profit Taking Halts New Rally Attempt

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP)—A futile attempt to give the aircrafts another push brought quick profit selling into today's stock market and aviation favorites, as well as leaders elsewhere, fell fractions to 2 points.

Shortly after the opening, modest initial advances were wiped out and selling was insistent enough for a brief period to put the ticker tape behind. Offerings then dried up and, with the pace slowing appreciably, extreme reversals were shaded near mid-day.

Curtiss-Wright started with a mark-up of ⅜ at 10¼ on a block of 20,000 shares. It later cancelled this while Douglas, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Bendix, North American Aviation and Consolidated Aircraft backed away rapidly.

Some buying at the beginning was attributed to the House passage of the arms embargo repeal which will enable plane makers to start shipping to belligerents just as soon as the President signs the bill. Subsequent liquidation on the "good news" was seen as a natural repercussion by brokers.

Bonds and commodities were uneven.

Q. AND A. BOX

M. Boston . . . Ideas on market action included in paragraph above . . . We answered question on oils earlier this week . . . But will try to get in a comment or two about industry soon.

A. B K., Arlington . . . Boston Elevated is an income proposition pure and simple . . . Some day the state may take over . . . But with the Legislature out it presents a god short term-high yield proposition, as we see it.

PRICE PROBLEM HERE DUE TO WAR

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

International News Service Economic Commentator

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (INS)—A vigorous conflict between major groups in the men's clothing field today dramatized the price problems created in the United States by the European war.

Capital and labor, as represented respectively by the Clothing Manufacturers Association of the United States and by Sidney Hillman's Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, have framed a formula for adjustment of prices.

The retailers, however, presenting their case as serving the best interests of their customers, have been acting through the National Retail Dry Goods Association to oppose "unwarranted price increases."

The principal objective of the department stores is to combat the manufacturers' plan to stamp their acceptances of spring clothing orders with a proviso for a price increase in case costs go up.

The manufacturers had acted on the warning by Mr. Hillman of the clothing union that failure to make this hedge would be at their own "peril," in view of the union's intention to seek wage increases to meet such increased living costs as may develop.

An attempt to break the present economic stalemate will be made at a meeting called for Nov. 8 at the Hotel Biltmore here, at which vendors of woolens, manufacturers of clothing, labor and the public will be represented.

The current struggle is of broad national interest because it symbolizes the new types of pricing problems which face makers of finished goods. With presidential approval, manufacturers generally, in the interest of stimulating greater business volume and fuller employment, have been showing price forebearance despite the sharp rise in Sept. in a raw material prices.

The technique which clothing manufacturers have proposed for shifting to retailers the risk of changes in cost may spread to other trades, and has already been adopted by one glove manufacturer. John Q. Public, who pays the freight, is involved because out of present discussions may come the answer to what the cost of living will be in 1940.

The sequence of events in the current battle royal over the pricing of men's clothing for next spring starts with the serving of notice by Mr. Hillman of the Amalgamated, that a rise in the cost of living might necessitate a wage demand on clothing manufacturers by the clothing workers.

On September 27, Mr. Hillman advised manufacturers, who represent 90 per cent of the industry, that the union would hold its increased wage demand in abeyance pending further study of upward trends in prices, but he urged manufacturers to make no commitments to retailers for the forthcoming spring season without a proviso for an increase in labor costs.

RETAIL BUYING SHOWS GAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP)—Buying in retail stores this week was a little larger than last week, and averaged between 9 and 16 per cent above a year ago for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

WAR, TWO MONTHS OLD, LAGS BEHIND 1914

By the Associated Press

Despite deadliest weapons in history—or perhaps because of them—the European war, two months old today, has lagged behind the World War.

The conflict on the western front has lacked the huge casualty lists, battles with hundreds of thousands engaged nad swift maneuvering that marked the corresponding period of 1914.

Only in the Polish campaign, starting Sept. 1, two days before Great Britain and France went to war against Germany, were there any large scale or decisive battles. Casualties there were vastly greater than on the Western Front, but less than on the Eastern Front in 1914.

Dead and wounded in the opening days of the World War were counted in the scores of thousands; 1939 western front reports count them in the low hundreds.

Germany reported only 196 killed and 356 wounded in the west up to Oct. 17. The Royal Air Force, only British service issuing casualty summaries, reported 122 dead up to last night. There have been no French casualty figures.

GREATER SEA LOSSES

Since Great Britain and France declared war

Germany has conquered Poland; sunk an estimated 433,168 tons of allied and neutral shipping; admittedly destroyed a British battleship and an aircraft carrier and conducted a few scattered air raids on the British Isles and on British ships.

Britain and France have blockaded Germany by sea; France has made a shortlived invasion of the Reich along the western front and Britain has carried out a few air raids on German naval bases.

During the first two months of the World War (Aug. 4-Oct. 4)—Germany dealt a terrific blow at Russia in the battle of Tannenburg; the Kaiser's armies swept through Belgium to drive within 40 miles of Paris before being stopped in the first battle of the Marne on the seas, German submarines, surface raiders and mines sank 399,947 tons of allied and neutral merchant shipping and seven British warships, including four cruisers; German warships spasmodically raided British seaport towns.

QUICK VICTIMS

The British fleet bottled up the German fleet in the North and the Russians repelled the Germans in the Baltic; Britain won a sea battle off Helgoland Bight and British naval craft sank six German warships, including five cruisers.

One similarity in the two wars has been the quick German victories on the eastern front.

The Nazi Blitzkrieg in Poland brought heavy death tolls to armed forces and civilian population. A few days before Warsaw fell, Polish officials estimated the death of their armed force as between 50,000 and 100,000. No estimate was made on the number of civilians killed.

With Poland conquered, Adolf Hitler declared German military casualties were 10,752 killed, 30,322 wounded and 3404 missing. German army communiques estimated 600,000 Polish prisoners had been taken.

At the outbreak of the World War, two Russian armies invaded East Prussia and made rapid progress until the battle of Tannenburg, Aug. 27-30, when the Russian armies were cut to ribbons.

Gen. Samsonoff, commander of one of the two Russian armies, was killed and of a total Russian force of 230,000 more than 70,000 were killed or wounded and 90,000 taken prisoner.

HEAVY U-BOAT TOLL

Warship losses on both sides were heavier during the World War than they have been in 1939.

The Germans in this war have claimed destruction of the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal, and said the battle cruiser Repulse was put out of commission.

The British responded by having a United States naval attache as their guest at religious services on the Ark Royal and denying the Repulse was damaged. The Germans subsequently modified their report to say merely that the Repulse had been "attacked" by a submarine.

In turn, the British admiralty asserts that French and British warships have sunk or disabled a third of the Nazi submarine fleet, which at the outbreak of the war was said to total about 60

During the first two months of 1914 the British warships Pathfinder, Aboukir, Cressy, Hogue, Pegasus, Amphion and Speedy were sunk by submarines or surface craft. The Germans lost the warships Mainz, Koler, Ariadue, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, Magdeburg and Hela.

THREE IN ONE HOUR

The outstanding naval feat of the first two months of the World War was the sinking within an hour of the British cruisers Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue by the submarine U-29, under Commander Otto Weddigen.

The most spectacular incident of the present war was the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak in the closely guarded Scapa Flow British naval base by a German submarine under Commander Guenther Prien.

Because the military airplane was in its infancy at the outbreak of the World War, there is little basis for comparison.

Nazi aircraft brought wholesale destruction to Poland, hastening that country's downfall. Air raids against the French and British have been restricted to isolated attacks, while most of the allied air activity has been confined to pamphlet droppings and observation work.

Russia Charges Finland With 'Looking for War'

In western but in eastern Europe as well, particularly on the Baltic coast."

It said that "naturally, the government of the U. S. S. R. was bound to address similar proposals to the fourth Baltic country bordering on the U. S. S. R.—Finland.

"It is sufficient to glance at the map of Finland to realize that the problems of security of U. S. S. R. are especially acute on the Finnish border.

"The Soviet Union not only has the right but is obliged to take measures to assure security of the sea and land approaches to Leningrad, whose population equals the entire population of Finland.

Pravda declared Russia had met Finland halfway on all important questions, mentioning that Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff Tuesday told the Supreme Soviet that Russia had not insisted on a mutual assistance pact because Finland believed such a pact was incompatable with her position of absolute neutrality.

"In exchange for territories on the Karelian isthmus and certain other areas, vitally necessary for the security of the U. S. S. R," said Pravda, "we offered Finland territory of double size in Soviet Karelia.

'However, contrary to common sense, certain leaders of Finland express no desire at all to reach an agreement with the U. S. S. R."

It asserted that the Fininsh government had taken "a number of emergency measures comprehensible only when a country is preparing for war; the evacuation of urban populations, mobilization of reservists and reorganization of industry to serve war needs.

PALE, FIDGETY WOMEN
ENRICH YOUR BLOOD & NERVES
With Amazing New Iron and Vitamin B

Women and girls over 14 years of age need to store up iron for the blood and get ample Vitamin B for the nerves.

When the iron lost each month is not replaced, you look sick, feel tired, nerves get frayed and jumpy, and you have all kinds of weak spells. But when your blood is rich with iron and your nerves are fully supplied with Vitamin B, your color comes back, pep returns, and you feel wonderful.

ENRICH is a remarkable combination of pure iron for the blood, with Vitamin B for the nerves. Your body gets more iron out of ENRICH each day than if you ate an entire bushel of spinach. And more Vitamin B than from 3 yeast cakes a day. Best of all, ENRICH tastes good. Just take a spoonful in milk or water before meals and at bedtime. Costs only a few pennies daily.

Start NOW to have rich blood and healthy nerves, which are needed to strengthen every tissue of your body and help all your organs function properly. We have so much confidence in ENRICH we will hand back your money if one bottle fails to help you feel better, eat better, sleep better and look better.

Battle to Save Girl Victim of Flames

Medical science was allied today with a boy's courage in a battle to save the life of nine-year-old Marilyn A. Kelly of Ingleside ave., Malden.

The girl was saved from flaming death by John J. Hartin, 12, of Winnemere st., Malden, who beat out flames touched off by a candle burning in a pumpkin.

Screaming with horror, the other boys and girls stood by and saw the flames consuming the girl's clothes. Not so young Hartin. He ripped off his sweater, ran to the girl's side and beat and rubbed out the flames until they were extinguished.

At the Maplewood hospital the girl was found to have been burned on the legs, face and hands and her name was placed on the danger list. Doctors, however, held out the hope that she would recover.

Asks Court Order Against Wire Co.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board announced that it had asked court enforcement of an order calling on Western Union to disestablish the association of Western Union employes as a collective bargaining agency.

The board mailed its petition to the second circuit court of appeals at New York. It alleges that the association is dominated by the company and has ordered repayment to employes of association dues deducted from pay envelopes since 1935.

JAPS BOMB HOSPITAL

SHANGHAI, Nov. 3 (AP) The British Church Missionary Society reported to the British embassy today that its hospital at Hinghua, 70 miles southwest of Foochow, was wrecked in a Japanese air raid on Wednesday.

Dinner Saturday To Fr. Stanford

On Saturday the Villanova College Club of Boston will have a dinner and reception in honor of Father Stanford, president of Villanova College at Hotel Lenox.

Joseph C. Tomaselio, president, has appointed Paul McDonald, of Belmont, chairman of the committee handling the affair. Father Stanford is a former Boston boy, whose family resides in Mattapan and who graduated from Boston College before he joined the Augustian Order.

'IT'S UNLOADED' BUT—

FULTON, Mo. (AP) Isaac R. Breid, Fulton antique dealer, says most of the ancient guns he buys are loaded. But sellers usually say they are sure they are empty.

Cagey, But Caged

A white-faced monkey played tag with three American Railway Express employes in the annex of Malden railroad station. The monkey escaped from its cage. The three repressmen chased it, over boxes and desks, to the rafters and back, then caught it.

'Fresh' to Officer, He Pays $10 Fine

When Milton D. Lavera, 22, of Clarendon st., Malden, was in Newton district court on a charge of driving with improper lights on his car, the complaining officer quoted Lavera as having said:

"I'm not going to go through the roof for you."

Lavera explained that the officer had asked for his license and registration which were in a pocket of his coat on the back seat and that he started to get out to go into the back seat when the officer said he did not need to get out.

"Don't you know," Judge Donald E. Mayberry said, "that it is unwise to get fresh with a police officer?"

Lavera—"I found that out." Judge Mayberry—"Remember it."

MICKEY ROONEY AND JUDY GARLAND
Who's Got a Wise-Crack?

Pull a Wisecrack, Collect Cash Prize

Front and center, you wise-crackers!

Don't waste your snappy line on members of your family. Instead, turn your wit in a more profitable direction—and earn yourself a cash prize or a pair of guest tickets to Loew's State and Orpheum theaters!

And that's YOUR good luck TWO WAYS!

Each day this week, still photos of the "Babes in Arms" stars, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, will be printed in the Boston Evening American.

Address your entry to the Babes in Arms Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

Winners will be selected by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials. Cash prizes offered total $50. And 35 pairs of guest tickets will be given to runners-up in the contest.

Mrs. Wise Hub Speaker Monday

Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, national president of the women's division of the American Jewish Congress, will be the speaker at the opening meeting of the Greater Boston women's division to be held next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Hotel Touraine, it was announced today.

Mrs. Wise, well known as a lecturer, has been engaged in the work of the congress for eight years, and with a group of other women organized the women's division that now numbers 15,000 members.

She founded the Congress Refugee House in New York, which cares for refugees from Germany, and the Free Synagogue Child Adoption Committee.

You Can Be Beautiful

Disguise Spots, Blemishes

By ARLINE GOULD

IF ONLY the earth would open up . . . and let me disappear gratefully into its oblivion . . . That might seem like a strong sentiment to the grown-up clan, but it's been in many a harried youngster's mind when her . . . or his . . . face developed knobby, reddened bumps, especially at a time when it was world-shakingly important to be at one's best . . .

And, believe us, it isn't the least bit exaggerated—this mental and emotional upset that comes with a disfigured skin. It's started uncountable inferiority complexes, delayed any number of careers, perhaps nipped them for good. But that was before a wonderful cover-up had been devised for just such happenings!

True, for beauty's sake we believe in routing evil from the inside, but there are times when expedience and downright mercy dictate a quick stand on camouflage. That's where an ingenuous looking flesh-toned affair, shaped and cased like a lipstick, comes in.

If you've found out that no amount of powder base and powdering could disguise the inflamed red pimples, or some permanent spot on the face, you'll realize what a miracle this "spot stick" really is. Because it deadens the fiery gleam, and blends unnoticeably with the clear, fair complexion.

It's just a trick of an instant to dab the creamy, flesh-toned stick to the pimple, or whatever. It should be dabbed on, not rubbed. And then the edges should be patted to merge with the clear skin. There are three shades, which will take care of the milkiest or the most tanned complexion—light, medium, and dark.

To learn about this efficient disguise for spots, pimples, or any discolorations (yes, even a black eye!) phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

JUST no need at all to have any pimple or blemish stare your friends out of countenance . . . not with a handy camouflage around in the form of a lipstick, which the pretty model applies with ease and dispatch. Arline Gould describes it today.

BERMUDA SALAD BOWL

(Tested by Good Housekeeping Institute)

INGREDIENTS

2 small head lettuce
½ large peeled Bermuda onion, thinly sliced
½ c. sliced stuffed olives
2-3 c. well-seasoned French dressing
3 oz. crumbled Roquefort cheese

METHOD OF PREPARATION

Wash cauliflower thoroughly. Separate cauliflower into flowerets and slice thin lengthwise. Break washed lettuce into pieces. Combine with all remaining ingredients and toss together. Serves 6 generously. To serve 2 or 3 make half this recipe.

Squash Crop Unusually Good

By MARTHA LEE

Squash which is being featured on all roadside stands, and markets, is of exceptional quality this year. Because of the dry season, the flavor, color and texture are unusually good—and the price is very reasonable, too.

Ninety per cent of the squash raised in Massachusetts is the Hubbard. Squash is liked by most New Englanders and has always been used in quantity. But many homemakers use it only two ways, mashed and in pie. Because of its bland flavor, squash lends itself to many combinations, and may be used in a variety of ways.

The darker yellow the meat, the higher the vitamin A content of any variety will be. One generous serving of Hubbard squash will supply the vitamin A requirements for the day.

In a study made by the Bureau of Home Economics of 25,000 families the country over, it was found that one of the outstanding deficiencies was vitamin A. This can be secured from any yellow food such as fish liver oils, butter, cream, milk and all yellow and green vegetables. It has been recognized by nutritionists for some time that yellow vegetables are a good source of vitamin A, and it has been recommended that they be included in the diet at least three times a week.

Squash may be purchased by the pound at most vegetable counters, but a large squash, if cut, will keep for a week in a cold place.

SCALLOPED SQUASH AND APPLES

2 lbs. squash
3 tart apples
2 tbsp. brown sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 tbsp. butter
½ cup bread crumbs

In a baking dish arrange alternate layers of raw squash cut into thin slices, and raw, tart apple slices. Season each layer with a little brown sugar, salt and dots of butter. Cover the top with buttered bread crumbs and bake at 400 deg. F. for 60 minutes or until the vegetable and fruit are tender and the crumbs brown.

SQUASH SLICES, DEEP FAT FRIED

Dip one-half slices of raw squash in egg, then in fine bread crumbs and fry in deep fat until a golden brown. These squash slices are particularly attractive to use on a luncheon or dinner plate with a creamed or roasted meat and a crisp salad.

SQUASH BAKED WITH PRUNES

2 lbs. squash
½ lb. prunes
¼ tsp. salt
2 or 3 tbsp. brown sugar

Cut the squash into slices and steam 15 minutes. Arrange in a casserole in alternating layers with tart prunes, cooked without sugar and stoned. Use small amount of brown sugar for seasoning. Bake, uncovered, in a 400 deg. F. oven for 30 minutes or until the squash is thoroughly tender.

MASHED SQUASH WITH BACON

Cut squash into slices about ½ inch thick, peel and steam until tender. Mash thoroughly, beat smooth and season with butter, salt and pepper. Heap the mashed squash into a baking dish, cover the top with strips of bacon and bake on the top shelf of the oven at 425 deg. F. until bacon is crisp.

WHOLE STUFFED SQUASH

1½ cups dry ground bread crumbs
1 lb. pork sausage, either link or bulk
1-3 cup boiling water
2 tbsp. chopped raw onion, if liked

Prepare the squash by washing and removing the seeds. Partially fry one-half of the pork sausage. Discard part of the fat which fries out. Mix the partially cooked meat, bread crumbs, seasonings and enough water to form a dry dressing. Fill the cavity of the squash with the dressing, set it into a baking pan and bake 70 to 80 minutes at 400 deg. F. The dressing will become moist as the juices of the squash cook into it. When done, remove to a chop plate and serve from shell at table.

Fashion Flash

YOU'LL look like little Russian princesses, done up in fur coats, caps and muffs . . . ready to jump into a troika and go out for a pot shot or two at wolves . . . and you'll have this "muffled in fur" look much less expensively, because the furriers in town are featuring absolutely adorable ensembles. Coat or jacket, muff and gayly tilted hats are a budget feature, amazingly so, and we're having some sketched to show you in next week's fashion pages.

Birthday Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Friday, Nov. 3

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY—You are not easily discouraged . . . Are a good soldier, a lasting friend, and a bitter enemy if wronged. The latter tendency (not to forgive and forget) is something for you to correct. The quality of FORGIVING is Godlike, revenge is for the hater, the person who becomes warped and bitter You can REMEMBER for the purpose of preventing wrong, but DO learn how to forgive gracefully. You are alert, artistic and practical; eager to make money, nevertheless generous. Self-mastery important.

HEARTS FOR ROMANCE . . . and horseshoes for good luck . . . what could be more appropriate for debutante party decorations? . . .

Margie McKean will have plenty of beaux and good fortune judging by all the hearts and horseshoes, made of fresh flowers, which decorated the walls of the ballroom at the Women's Republican Club for her debut dance last evening . . . Hearts about two feet wide, made of red carnations, and big horseshoes of white chrysanthemums, encrusted with red flower "M's" (for Margarett, of course) were hung between the crystal candelabras on the walls, and in each corner of the ballroom stood a tall orange tree bearing fresh fruit . . . A large flower "M" was festooned on the crimson drapes which hung across the end of the room opposite the entrance . . .

The adjoining room, with its carved white walls, was transformed into a replica of a Bermuda garden with huge standards of Easter lilies, and provided extra space for dancing . . .

Billowy Gown of White Net

THE ATTRACTIVE DEBUTANTE wore a billowy gown of white net with an off-the-shoulder bodice and full skirt trimmed with bands of net ruching . . . She received with her grandmother, Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton and her mother, Mrs. Q. A. Shaw McKean . . . The latter wore pearls with her gown of black velvet trimmed with blue and silver beading, and Mrs. Haughton's black velvet had a bodice of coral satin . . .

A number of Margie's attractive friends dined with the ushers at a U-shaped table festooned with red carnation hearts and white candles in mirror holders . . . Among them were Joan Griess in an effective off-the-shoulder gown of black velvet, with long black velvet gloves to match . . . Pauline McKean, cousin of the hostess, wore a green and white ombre starched chiffon, and her sister, Mrs. R. Bennett Forbes chose a beautiful costume of pastel pink chiffon with a deep hem and bertha of black lace . . .

Marion Leeson Becomes Bride Today

THE CORNER of Arlington and Newbury streets will be jammed with shiny limousines and fashionable pedestrians around four this afternoon as guests hustle into almost adjacent churches for two of the autumn's most prominent weddings . . .

At Arlington Street Church Constance Turner becomes the bride of Arthur Dupee, Jr., and just around the corner in Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel, Marion Leeson, one of Society's leading feminine skippers, changes her name to Mrs. Joseph H. Morey, Jr. . . .

Miss Leeson, daughter of Robert A. Leeson of Commonwealth avenue, is wearing an heirloom pearl necklace with her gown of ivory bengaline . . . Her illusion tulle veil falls from a coronet of orange blossoms and she is carrying white alba lilies with ivory leaves trailing to the hem of her skirt . . .

The attendants, Mrs. Walter E. Campbell, Mrs. Robert Leeson and Mrs. Philip M. P. Boocock, are wearing moonstone blue crepe with hats of wine color twisted chenille and felt, and their bouquets are also trailing arrangements of wine red flowers and green and white leaves . . . The reception is at The Country Club . . .

Dupee-Turner Ceremony

CONNIE TURNER and Arthur Dupee are being married by Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill and Rev. Dana McL. Greeley . . . The vivacious bride, a prominent member of the Vincent Club, is wearing ivory satin with a veil of family heirloom lace, a coronet of orange blossoms and a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids . . .

Her close friend, Mrs. Richard K. Thorndike, Jr. (Lucy Rantoul), with whom she has played in many a Vincent show skit, is matron of honor and the bridesmaids are Jeannie and Clara Dupee, Mrs. William T. Kemble, Mrs. Franklin T. Benkard, Mrs. Jackson Turner and Mrs. J. Burke Wilkinson . . . Their gowns are of jewel tone velvet with matching hats, dusty pink veils and bouquets of dusty pink flowers . . .

WHAT IS A BALANCED DIET? | DOES HOMOGENIZING BENEFIT MILK?

—By DR. WALTER H. EDDY—

Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

What is a balanced diet?

I do not wonder that you ask this question, for so many food products and mixtures are described as "balanced" without indication as to what is balanced in the mixtures.

In the science of nutrition we consider a diet balanced when it provides all the nutrients, vitamins, and minerals that the body needs for energy, for growth and repair, and for the normal operation of the body organs.

There are definite minimum requirements for each of these essentials, and the only way to determine whether the diet is actually balanced is to analyze it for the kinds and amounts of these materials present.

My article, "Counting Vitamins and Counting Costs," in the February, 1939, Good Housekeeping, will help you do this analyzing as you plan your daily menus.

Easier to Digest

What effect on milk has the process of homogenizing? Does it make it better than ordinary milk?

Homogenizing is accomplished by forcing milk through small apertures or in other ways breaking it up so that the fat globules and solids are very finely divided.

It accomplishes the same thing that you do much less efficiently when you take a bottle of milk in which the cream has risen to the top and shake it to redistribute that cream throughout the milk.

Because of the fine subdivision of the particles of the fat effected by homogenizing, the digestive juices which handle them in your system are able to get at this material more rapidly and effectively; and there is no question but that milk so treated digests more quickly than milk with larger fat particles.

Enchanting Zorina Steals All Honors in 'On Your Toes'

Para-Fenway Hit by Dancer

By PEGGY DOYLE

"On Your Toes," which stems from the Rodgers-Hart-Abbott hit musical of some seasons back, doesn't always stay there but for many in Paramount and Fenway audiences this week the enchanting Zorina will be sufficient compensation.

Zorina, who's a heavenly thing even without the wings she wore behind the Shubert footlights last season in "I Married An Angel," does some ballet-dancing that is pure poetry. She alone is worth the price of admission but what a field-day it would have been for the customers if the script and the direction had matched her soaring talent! But, woe is me, and you and you ! ! !

• • •

Although Albert's dancing is not in the Bolger class, he gives a persuasive performance and teams nicely with Zorina. Some of the farce is as broad as Frank McHugh's good-natured face, the latter's distracted manager role suffering from this disability.

• • •

You may remember the story, which had to do with Phil Dolan, 3d, (Eddie Albert), dancing offspring of James Gleason and Queenie Smith, who are convincing and convulsing as oldtime vaudevillians. The youngster and a little Russian girl, also a dancer, are forever encountering each other on tour and are childishly in love.

When both are grown, they meet again, recognize each other delightedly and the girl, Zorina, is to appear in "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," a modern ballet Eddie Albert has written. The ballet develops a highly exciting denouement, and one that Albert never wrote into it.

On the same bill, "Smashing the Money Ring," co-starring Ronald Regan and Margot Stevenson, chalks up more victories for the G-men.

Amateur Awards At Globe Tonight

The Globe's Friday night amateur radio show will have 20 contestants tonight. The audience will act as judges of their talents. There will be prizes for winners. Sharing the spotlight with these unknowns will be the late World's Fair dance sensation, Tirzah.

Boston's Movie Clock appears today on Page 46.

Gala Midnight Show at Howard

Diana Rowland and Tul'ah and Miy are the stars of tonight's midnight show at the Old Howard, starting at 11:30. Others in the cast of 60 are Max Fuhrman, Harry Evanson, Princess Aloha, the Three Arnolds, the Edwards Sisters, the Three Bishop Brothers, Alma Maiben, Dot Darling, Bongard and Dooley, Herbie Barris, Leona and Edith and Roberta Forest.

HELLINGER'S 'ROARING TWENTIES' GAY HISTORY OF ERA

Met Offers Smart Film

By PEGGY DOYLE

Those vanished days of dingy "speaks," milk-tippling bootleggers, bathtub gin and "Melancholy Baby" are as if they had never fled on the Metropolitan screen this week.

The reason is Warners' release of Mark Hellinger's graphic recapitulation of that shameful but exciting period in America's history, "The Roaring Twenties."

As a seasoned Broadway columnist of the days when the speakeasy was a favorite rendezvous for young and old, the only posted as well as the dese-dose-and-dem brotherhood and, particularly, for the vast group that was holding its collective nose and swilling down the undrinkable stuff for no other reason than that it was prohibited, the Boston Advertiser's special writer is unusually well qualified to be its historian.

Two of the most colorful characters of the Broadway of that era, Texas Guinan and Larry Fay, may be recognizable to the newsreeling public as the Panama Smith and the Eddie Bartlett of the Hellinger story. Both have long since departed this scene but their surviving relatives and friends can have no quarrel with the thinly disguised portraits Hellinger has painted and Gladys George and James Cagney have given flesh and blood.

Both are likable people, as Gladys George and James Cagney portray them. In the picture, Texas is represented as having been in love with Fay, although actually theirs was supposed to have been a business relationship solely.

Priscilla Lane's Jean Sherman, night club singer in Cagney's night club and beloved by him, also might be a real-life character, a still very alive and pretty girl who once sang in Fay's El Fay Club and of whom he was fiercely jealous. She, too, is pleasantly presented.

The script, which Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay and Robert Rossen adapted for the screen, sizzles with action. Under Raoul Walsh's expert direction, it has a machine-gun tempo.

Cagney's performance is particularly outstanding in a cast that is uniformly excellent. As is his habit, he trademarks this performance. Once, he shoved a grapefruit in a screen-beauty's face. Another time he spanked a glamour-girl where the sun never set. This time, just to be different, he grabs a cigar from Nightclub Proprietor Ed Keene's kisser and crams it back again into shapelessness.

"Kid Nightingale" co-stars John Payne and Jane Wyman.

JEROME KERN and Oscar Hammerstein collaborating on "Very Warm for May," first Kern-Hammerstein musical in seven years, which comes to the Colonial stage Monday night.

Submarine Epic at Trans-Lux

"U-Boat 29," Columbia's British-made release of the Irving Asher production, pre-dates the war, yet it's a picture which opens on the Trans Lux screen today is said to have the timeliness of today's headlines.

Based on actual incidents of the first World War, the new Columbia film is reported as having its counterpart in recent events, particularly the tragic sinking of the Royal Oak.

Featured in the picture are Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson and Sebastian Shaw. Based on J. Storer Clouston's celebrated novel, "U-Boat 29," tells of the attempt of an enemy submarine commander to obtain information concerning the movement of the British fleet. How the attempt is foiled by the counter-activities of a British naval officer and a village school mistress are episodes of stirring dramatic distinction.

The co-feature is Should Husbands Work, a first-run film with the Gleason family. Mary Wilson is starred.

'The Women' Tops New Bowdoin Bill

"The Women," with an all-female cast of 135 actresses headed by Rosalind Russell, Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford, begins a four-day engagement on Lowe-con screen starting tomorrow. On the same bill with Clive Brook's Broadway hit will be "Espionage Agent" co-starring Joan McCrea and Lucile Marshall, promising observers.

OLYMPIA'S FILMS

"The Old Maid," Bette Davis starring picture with Miriam Hopkins and George Brent, and "Torchy Plays With Dynamite," will be the Washington St. Olympia features, beginning tomorrow.

Named as "master mind" and "big shot" of the whole alleged lottery racket was Abraham F. Zimmerman, Chicago.

Indicted with him on main counts of fraud and conspiracy were other alleged ringleaders, including Russell F. "Duke" Emerich, former University of Chicago football star, and James H. Van Natta, retired Chicago police lieutenant.

ALLEGED "FRONT MAN"

Emerich, listed as a resident of Casey, Ill., is alleged to have been office manager and "front man" for the Twentieth Century Sales Co., claimed to have been a distributing agency for the indicted Gold Bond lottery company.

Former Police Lieut. Van Natta allegedly acted as distributing agent for Zimmerman over a five-year period, operating principally in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Of the 72 individuals indicted, two were Chicago women, Mrs. Gertrude Becker, named as Zimmerman's private secretary, and Mrs. Elizabeth Rice, former Will Rogers Memorial Hospital nurse and superintendent of nurses, Zimmerman's alleged "contact" with Will Rogers' name.

Other indictments returned were against:

BAKER, WILLIAM E., Indianapolis, Ind.
BRODY, ABRAHAM A., Chicago.
DEACON, DR. FRANK, Chicago, World War colonel in the U. S. Army Medical Corps.

MARGOLIS, CLIFF, Canton, O.
MESSNER, CHARLES, Reading, Pa.
MINTEER, JOHN F., Ellwood City, Pa.
NELLY, HERBERT V., Pittsburgh, Pa.
PETERS, HENRY CHARLES, Pittsburgh, Pa.
ROGERIO, FORD J., Pittsburgh, Pa.
SCHEDROW, FRANCES, Brooklyn, N. Y., alleged confidential secretary of Frank Spitzler, who was named as eastern organizer and distributor for the fake lottery racket.
SCHOENBERG, PHIL, Brooklyn, N. Y., alleged traveling organizer.
SERAVALLI, JOHN J., Union City, N. J., Spitzler's son-in-law.
SHEEHAN, THOMAS J., Chicago Heights, alleged conductor of Twentieth Century Sales Co., fake lottery distribution agency, according to federal probers.
SPITZLER, FRANK, Union City, N. J., alleged eastern organizer.
SPOOLER, ALBERT, Milwaukee, Wis.

WERLEY, CARLTON, Allentown, Pa.
WERLEY, WILLARD, Allentown, Pa.
NEELY, HERBERT U., Pittsburgh, Pa.
WHITELEY, CHARLES L., Youngstown, O.
WILSON, WILLIAM L., Cleveland, O.

The magnitude of the government's preparations was shown in the wealth of exhibits submitted by the government for inspection of the grand jurors. There were 15 tons of tickets in lotteries alleged to be fakes in false sweepstakes purporting to aid the Will Rogers Memorial Fund.

There were lottery advertisements and thousands of telegrams, telephone records, messages, bank records and photostatic copies of letters and printed matter.

At the closing hearing by the grand jury, Special Officer Thomas Prenderville of Chicago and Postal Inspector Tennyson Jefferson gave a summary of allegedly overt acts of the Chicago defendants. That was on July 29, last.

Mrs. Will Rogers, widow of the famous humorist, was a witness. She was escorted in the grand jury room by United States Attorney Edmund J. Brandon and his assistant, Jackson J. Holtz and Postal Inspector Tennyson Jefferson.

YOUNG STAR WITNESS

Owen D. Young, nationally known financier, was the star witness at another session of the grand jury. He is chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Fund, a permanent charity formed in memory of the great humorist-cowboy. He testified, according to Brandon, that the fund refused permission to a Chicago group of "sportsmen" to use the name of the fund in a lottery scheme. Despite the refusal, the name was used in a nation-wide distribution of the tickets.

War Hunch Costs Bookie $12,000

LONDON, Nov. 3 (INS)—A well-known British bookmaker has met his obligations and has paid up cheerfully—but it would not be wise to mention Hitler in his presence. Convinced that there would be peace that he was betting 20 to 1 that England would not be at war with Germany within six months.

His hunch wrong; he paid out £2,000 ($12,000) on bets for his London clients alone.

NOW! $6.41 MONTHLY REPAYS $100 LOAN

Cash loan you get	Amount you pay back each month including all charges: 6 months loan	12 months loan	16 months loan	20 months loan
$ 20	$ 3.63	$ 1.95
50	9.08	4.87
70	12.71	6.82	$ 5.36	$ 4.49
100	18.15	9.75	7.66	6.41
125	22.69	12.19	9.57	8.02
150	27.23	14.62	11.49	9.62
200	36.31	19.50	15.32	12.83
250	45.39	24.37	19.15	16.04
300	54.46	29.25	22.98	19.24

Examine this table. It shows that $6.41 per month repays everything on a $100 loan in 20 months. Or $9.75 per month repays a $100 loan in 12 months. The faster you pay, the less the total cost.

One Price to All

These payments are calculated at Household's rate of 2½% per month which is less than the maximum permitted by the Small Loan Law and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign—no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives. To apply, phone, write or visit office.

THE BRUINS are the super-club of the National Hockey League even without Eddie Shore in their road games, according to Paul Thompson of the Chicago Blackhawks. Thompson made this statement to Tom Shehan, sports editor of the Nationwide News Service.

I believe Thompson has made a correct size-up of the Bruins. The holders of the Stanley Cup have a young, powerful club, and the youthful players should be better this season than they were a year ago. I do not believe there is a club in the National Hockey League that can dislodge the Bruins from their present position.

The only cloud over the future of the Bruins is the war. Most of the players on the club are Canadians, and in the event of conscription would end up on the battlefields in Europe. A long war would be very harmful to the future of the Bruins as well as of the league.

There will not be any conscription in Canada before next Spring at the earliest, and as a result the various clubs will not be disturbed this season.

It is seldom that a National Hockey League Club has secured so many star young players as the Bruins. Art Ross and Weston Adams built up a farm system as successful as that of the Yanks in baseball, and it has brought results.

Favors Pro Football Club in Boston

IN HIS LETTER to me, Shehan says George Halas of the Chicago Bears is strong for a professional football team in Boston.

"Halas," declared Shehan, "considers Bob McLeod, former Dartmouth star, the best back defending against forward passing he has ever seen come out of college ranks.

"Halas declares Bill Osmanski, former Holy Cross star, is the best line plunger he has had since Bronko Nagurski played for him. Halas uses Gary Famiglietti, formerly of Boston University, in the same backfield with Osmanski and McLeod to clear the way for them, which would please Murray Kramer, who always wrote that 'Fam' could play with the best.

"Charley McGuinness of Marblehead is being considered for a coaching job in professional football in the mid-West. Charley turned out great teams in Marblehead, and should do well in the pro game.

"I had a chance to observe Paul Chad and Bob Carse of Providence in the Blackhawks' training camp in St. Paul. They will be top stars in a year or two, and they will be standouts in Providence this year.

"Charley McVarish, who used to do newspaper work in Boston, is in the Chicago office of Carl Byoir & Co. He has an excellent job, and is happily located. Say hello for me to Al McCoy and Bill Brennan. Also remember me to Dave Wilson and the rest of the boys in the press box at Narragansett Park. I note Wilson is setting new highs for winners. They are running Dave's Narragansett selections in the Chicago Herald-American. Chicago bookies have been hit hard during Wilson's latest winning streak."

"Tex" Wheeler One Up on Larry MacPhail

LARRY MacPHAIL, colorful business manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has received much publicity as a result of his suggestion that there be an inter-league series at the close of each season. The top teams would play against each other, while clubs with similar ranking down the line would also clash.

A letter from "Tex" Wheeler of the news staff of this newspaper reminds me that "Tex" made a similar suggestion that was published in this column after the Yanks walloped the Cubs in the 1938 world's series. Wheeler's suggestion brought forth considerable favorable comment at the time. MacPhail caused a national turmoil in baseball when he came to bat with the same idea a year later.

If the Yanks continue smacking over National League clubs, some change should be made in the present order of events to keep up interest in the annual Fall baseball classics.

The Red Sox were the only club that could give the Yanks any serious opposition this year. In the final pennant rush, the Sox weakness in the box and in the catching department was too much of a handicap for the club to overcome.

Tom Yawkey has been building up farm strength, and in time will have better youngsters coming up each year. For the time being, however, the Yanks are still a dozen lengths out in front of the field.

"Tex" Wheeler wrote from the Winchester Hospital where he was having a session with the doctors.

"I'll be out in a day or so, I hope," says "Tex" with that wonderful cheerful way of his.

P. S.—He's out—all merry and bright again.

Random Shots at Target

WITH IMPROVED weather, the racing and attendance at Narragansett Park should improve . . . Princeton will give Harvard a severe test on Saturday . . . The Tigers have shown better football form than the Crimson this season.

Herring Loses Leg As Harvard Leaves

By DAVE GLUECK

Despite the poor showing of the Harvard football team, and the criticisms of the press and public, "through all this controversy I still would not want Harvard to be any different than it is," said Coach Dick Harlow at the rally which marked the end of home preparation for the Princeton game.

The bulky mentor was greeted with a rousing ovation as he stood in his football clothes, head uncovered, and rejected scornfully suggestions that Harvard go out and "get" a team.

Other highlights of the rally which followed the team's last hard pre-Tiger workout were speeches by Capt. Torby Macdonald, Huntington R. (Tack) Hardwick and PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3 (AP)—Gloom hung over Princeton University's campus as news spread that Donald G. (Hooker) Herring's left leg would be amputated today.

The powerful right tackle, injured in last week's Brown game, as yet has not been told of the decision disclosed by his father, Donald G. Herring, Sr., a Tiger football great three decades ago.

"The reason," the father said, "is that the blood can't get down into his lower leg because the arteries have been destroyed." Then he added:

"Don won't be a cripple; he'll be able to walk around just as well as I do. All it means is that he loses a year of football and a couple of years of track."

The operation was to be performed by Dr. Robert W. Johnson, Jr., of Johns Houkins, a Princeton graduate.

Throughout Old Nassau all talk had been of "the Hooker" and the tough break that came to him at 21.

Only his teammates, their lips tightly set against releasing what was in their hearts, avoided the subject as they grimly went ahead with preparations for tomorrow's contest with Harvard.

In Princeton hospital Don, 237 pounds of six feet four, would ask how things were going for the opening game of the "Big Three" series.

A junior and a major in geology, Don resides nearby Lambertville. His mother and father are staying with friends in Princeton for the offensive show, with Auburn pass-minded, and the Eagles now boasting a colorful attack. These eleven, probable starters tomorrow, are showing the new B. C. uniform, white jerseys and gold pants.

TIGER-HUNTING EAGLES—Thundering ahead pointed for Auburn's invasion of Fenway Park tomorrow afternoon are these eleven Boston College Eagles. Major intersectional clash of the day, the game is expected to provide a wild

Whether Lou Montgomery, star Eagles' back, plays against Auburn tomorrow will not be decided until late today, when the officials at the Heights confer with grid leaders from Alabama

John P. Curley, graduate manager of Athletics at Boston College was unable to answer the moot question concerning Montgomery put to him by the scribes that gather each afternoon on the Maroon and Gold stamping ground.

According to Curley "the decision rests with Auburn." We intend to bring the subject up as soon as we contact the visitors and until such time, all is in a quandary.

Auburn, which comes from the deep South may prove better sportsmen. Without the colored flash the Eagles will be the underdog.

Head Coach Frank Leahy, the professional pessimist and backfield coach, Ed McKeever (the latter has twice scouted the southern-two things—that the Jack Meagher mentored Tigers have already lost three games and can't lose another, and the sights that appeared before the startled eyes of Scout McKeever on his twin trips to the scene of Auburn tussles. Ed is still shuddering from the effects of watching the powerhouse Tigers go to town against Georgia Techers) see dire things in store for their team.

AUBURN POWERFUL

According to Bob McKelvey, who handles the chief scouting duties for B. U.'s Pat Hanley, Auburn can field a first eleven which will compare with any team in the country.

"It's the weakness of the reserves which works against the Tigers," McKelvey said yesterday. In company with McKeever the Terrier hawkshaw watched Auburn throw away a game of football to the rising Manhattan eleven two weeks ago.

Today's practice will probably be devoted to the usual day-before-a-game signal dri'l but may encompass further instruction on how to guard a passer.

With Auburn sporting a line which is the next thing to a brick wall, the Eagles may be forced to rely on an air game to keep abreast of the opposition. If such is the case Chucking Charles O'Rourke who has done his share of bench lounging these recent Saturdays will undoubtedly be called upon for assistance.

YANKEES TO START

For a time yesterday it appeared that the same lineup which started last week would again hear the opening whistle tomorrow. However at the conclusion of a light workout Coach Leahy announced that Big John Yauckoes would take over the right tackle job, with sophomore Morro, last Saturday's starter held in reserve. Yauckoes missed the St. Anselm game after a knee injury kept him out of action for a whole week.

Powerful Manhattan Here for B. U. Battle

Manhattan's power grid squad, consisting of three full teams, arrived in town early today for its encounter with Boston University at National League Field tomorrow afternoon.

The Jaspers' record which shows two victories and two defeats does not appear any too impressive but a study of the teams met, makes Manhattan's achievements to date strong enough to rank it with the leaders in the East.

After losing its opener to Holy Cross, the Jaspers evened matters by downing St. Bonaventure. Then came the bad break of the season. After running the undefeated Duquesne team up and down the field all afternoon, one slip gave the Dukes a touchdown and victory, 7 to 0.

Manhattan came right back, though, two weeks ago and upset Auburn, one of the best teams in the country. Since that triumph, the Jaspers have had two full weeks of rest and will enter tomorrow's game at full strength.

CAPT. FALL TO START

Even Capt. Jerry Fall, who has been sidelined for the past two weeks with a bad leg, will be ready to start at right guard.

There is only one local boy on the Manhattan squad and he will see very little action for a curious reason. This individual is Manlio Boverini, a 190-pound halfback from Lynn. Boverini is the best placement booter on the squad and Coach Herb Kopf refuses to take any chances on his getting hurt.

Notre Dame Picked To Repulse Army

(By the Associated Press)

Army-Notre Dame—The Cadets have been sad disappointments this year, mainly because of line weakness. It's possible they will rise to the occasion, but there's no possible selection but Notre Dame.

Louisiana State-Tennessee—Another real test for the powerful Volunteers. L. S. U.'s Leo Bird and Ken Kavanaugh are just about the most effective passing combination extant, but this vote goes to Tennessee.

Arkansis-Texas A. and M.—Possible surprise package here, for Arkansas is always dangerous at Fayettevile. Still, undefeated Texas A. and M.

Oregon State-Southern California: Two undefeated teams battle for a probable Rose Bowl berth. Southern California.

Cornell-Columbia: Not much doubt that Cornell is in for a letdown but hardly enough to permit Columbia to run off with this. Cornell.

Fordham-Rice: Rice may well be the best long shot of the day but we'll follow the form sheets and take Fordham.

Detroit - Villanova: Very close Villanova.

Texas-Southern M.—Olist: S. M. U. But the Mustangs will find Jack Crain a problem.

Temple-Pitt: Probably very close. Pitt.

Yale-Dartmouth: A shaky vote for Dartmouth.

Penn-Navy: Looking for Penn to bounce back after the North Carolina debacle. Penn.

Harlow Defends Harvard Policy

William J. Bingham, director of athletics

The boys put in over two hours on the field dividing their time between dummy offensive scrimmage, defense against Princeton's plays, punting under pressure, passing offense and signals.

As they came off the field they were met by the Harvard band and some 500 students gathered in front of the Dillon Field House. The players slipped into their ba ba coats and took seats with the speakers on the field house balcony facing the stadium.

VETERAN TIGER TEAM

The scene was lit by crimson flares as Manager John Atherton introduced the speakers. Captain Mac donald speaking first, expressed the hope that history would repeat itself in regard to the outcome of the Harvard-Princeton game

For the past two years triumphs over the Tiger have marked the turning point in the Crimson season, and optimistic fans believe that the Nassau saber teeth are helpless on the day they face Harvard

Two years ago Princeton was very weak, last year they were fooled just long enough for Harvard to set up some scores. After that they settled down, became steadily tougher as the game wore on Tomorrow, twelve of the same men will be playing for the Orange and Black, and Coach Wieman probably wants this game more than any other after two consecutive losses to the Crimson. Everyone knows the situation at Soldiers Field; Harvard has considerably less than an even chance of winning, but if they do, it will certainly give credence to the legend that on Harvard day the Tiger can't see red.

BINGHAM PRAISES HARLOW

William J. Bingham stated that he "could take" the criticisms he was getting. He went on to declare that Harlow was the best coach in the country, and that he was teaching the team winning football.

At this point, the students who had been waving their flags and cheering were suddenly silent, but the band struck up again, and the audience cheered as Harlow's speech ended the rally.

Max Delays U. S. Trip

The big German said as much today when he arrived here by plane from Barcelona. He looked in top-notch condition and said he weighed 193 pounds, compared to his usual fighting weight of 190.

"I still think I can beat Louis," Schmeling added.

However, Max doesn't plan to go to the United States just now. He explained that he was here to look over the ground for a movie which his wife, Annie Ondra, plans to make in Spain.

Geraghty Eleven Meets 'Merchants'

The deciding contest to determine the league leaders of the Park Department will be staged Sunday afternoon at Fens Stadium, Roxbury, when the Geraghty contingent of Roxbury clash with the league-leading Mattapan Merchants, in what looms as the outstanding fray of the day.

N. H. Reporter Now Harrier Star

DURHAM, N. H., Nov. 3 (INS)—The transition from "leg man" on the college newspaper to head leg man on the University of New Hampshire cross country team today had proved an easy jump for Ted Underwood.

Underwood, newly elected captain of the New Hampshire harriers, never wore running togs in his life until the college paper sent him on a cross country meet assignment.

Sweet's instinct was justified when Underwood not only became the best harrier in the university but also developed into a crack two miler, steeplechaser and relay runner.

Three Braintree Gunners Back Home With Two Deer

By DARK MONTREAL

Fred Campbell, Bill Frier and Jimmy Robertson, all of Braintree, tried out a new system of "hunting by compass" in the wild country up the other side of Milan, N. H., this week.

Frier was the only one of the three used to handling a compass in the woods, so he told the other two:

"I'll head due north out of camp. You, Campbell, head northeast for a couple of hours, then swing northwest. You, Robertson, go northwest first, then swing northeast. That will bring us all together, straight north, about noon."

A spot was picked for the meeting place, and everybody started off, according to schedule. But half an hour later, Frier heard a crashing in the brush to his left. It was Campbell.

"That blamed compass was no good to me," he panted. "It had me all turned around, so I heaved it in a swamp."

"I'm no ancient mariner," he sputtered. "And I don't need any navy gadget to get me through the brush. Here's your compass and to hell with it. Let's take our bearings by landmarks and the lay of the country, like we always did before."

• • •

"Moral of the story," Frier said today, "is probably 'Learn to use a compass before you take it into the woods.' It won't help you much until you get the hang of it.

"Our party came home happy, with a young spike-horn buck and a nice 150-pound doe.

"We all used .30-30 rifles, as usual. And don't let the gun sharps kid you. Nobody needs anything heavier than a .30-30 for New England deer.

"If a fellow wants to invest his cash in something fancier, good enough for him. Maybe he'll find a higher priced gun that just suits him. But the .30-30 will kill 'em, if you're marksman enough to hit 'em."

• • •

And they came back with two rin-tails apiece, bagged in Hopkinton.

• • •

Massachusetts and New Hampshire gunners alike are being asked to exercise care this season not to shoot chukar partridges, the foreign species of game bird New England conservation authorities are trying to introduce to breed and multiply here.

• • •

"In size, the chukar is twice that of the valley quail or bobwhite. His plumage is a pale grayish brown and when the sun shines on his back a bluish tinge can be noted. There is a black border which starts above the eyes, runs along the head and arches down the neck and across the throat. A light spot about an inch in diameter is encircled by this border. Dark brown eyes are surrounded by red skin, the pointed beak is bright red, ear feathers are brown and there is a shine to his red legs."

Definitely, the chukar doesn't appear to be a bird likely to be mistaken for a native species.

Federal funds, newly made available for wild life restoration projects in New England will be utilized in part, in New Hampshire, to conduct a thorough study of the ruffed grouse in his natural enviroment.

Undisputed king of game birds in this section of America, the grouse—colloquially misnamed "partridge"—has thus far defied close investigation by experts, and efforts to breed the species in captivity have had negligible success.

But now, at suggestion of Director Robert H. Stobie of the New Hampshire fish and game commission, Granite State biologists are about to establish two experimental areas of 1000 acres each in every one of New Hampshire's ten counties.

One area in each county will be declared a game refuge. The other will be left unguarded, as a check.

Behavior, increase or decrease, and general health of ruffed grouse in each pair of areas will be carefully observed and compared.

Experiments will be made in improving cover and providing various sorts of natural food for the birds. An essential object will be made to determine the best methods for summer management of young grouse and breeding stocks.

FRED HITS MARK—Here are Bill Frier and Fred Campbell, Braintree Sports Shop partners, with 130-pound doe Fred shot on their recent hunting trip to northern New Hampshire. Bill killed a young buck—but friends who liked venison steak got to it before the cameraman.

Joe O'Donnell To Defend Title

New England fight fans are getting excited over the coming intercity show which the Irish-American A. A. will offer at the Arena Monday night. Mindful of what the home boys are capable of doing within the ropes, after watching recent performances, local ring followers are confident that our entry of simon-pure punch throwers will more than meet what the boys from Cleveland will have to offer.

There will be six classes of intercity competition, and three other divisions—two at open weights of 147 and 160 pounds and one bracket for the novices at 135 pounds.

All-America Entry Blank

The following classes will be contested in tryouts in the Hearst All-America boxing show at Arena, Nov. 13, Nov. 20, Nov. 27, Dec. 4.

112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds and heavyweight

Brockton, Salem Best Game on School Grid Card

WITCHES BARRIER TO STATE GRID TITLE

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

Brockton's burly grid machine, leading contender for the state championship, will probably move a game nearer its goal tomorrow afternoon when the squad invades Bertram Field for its annual clash with Salem in the outstanding game on a lively schoolboy program

Outweighing its rivals almost 20 pounds to the player, the invading club will be favored to register its fifth victory of the season in six starts.

Going into the last half of its schedule, Brockton lists Worcester Trade, New Bedford, Newton and Fitchburg as easy victims, with only a Medford deadlock upsetting an otherwise perfect slate. This showing, combined with the mixup surrounding the other major elevens, has sent the Shoe City team to the top ranking in the pennant chase.

Last year Billy Gold and Bernie Lanoue combined in a late aerial attack to defeat Salem, and this same combination will be working in the Brockton backfield in this tilt. Lanoue has been especially effective this season, working his way near the top of the field in individual scoring honors.

WITCHES TAKE TO AIR

Coach Bill Broderick will depend on the fleetness of Stan Jaworski and an air attack to try to bring about an upset. Neil Dooley, Jaworski and Art Durkee all pass, and everything indicates a bombing by the Witches.

Salem's other offensive threat will be in the talented toe of Don Williams, center. Williams, a long and accurate punter, shifts out of the line to do the kicking and has been known to throw passes at unexpected times.

Lawrence High, Brockton's closest rival with an identical record, should not have too much trouble taking care of Beverly in another North Shore feature. Beverly has not impressed in its games thus far and will probably prove only an extended workout for the invaders.

MEDFORD FACES NEWTON

Unbeaten but twice tied, Medford faces a stiffer test than expected when Newton moves its forces into the Fulton st. grounds. Last week, Coach Owen MacDowell's boys held a highly favored Rindge Tech to a 6-6 tie and should prove a tough club to down.

Somerville, somewhat recovered from its pair of beatings after a week's layoff, will have co-Capt. John Brennan back in its line-up for the Malden game but even his return does not put the McManus club up to the Golden Tornado. Warren McGuirk will probably go home with another dish of triumph.

Coach George Kenneally's Revere outfit appears doomed to another defeat when Everett, blanked from the win column for the past two weeks, takes revenge on the Beach City crew. Jackie Comerford and his mates appear to be too much for the guests.

On the North Shore another capacity crowd is assured at Gloucester when Coach Buzz Harvey leads his surprising Saugus club against the Fishermen. The Sachems are due for a hard battle but will probably edge their hosts.

Art Harrison On Tufts Varsity

The Tufts gridmen, in a final move to prepare for the Brown game tomorrow at Providence, are spending this afternoon limbering up from the heavy scrimmage of yesterday afternoon in which teams A and B alternated using the Brown plays on both offense and defense.

Sophomore Art Harrison, a passer-kicker-carrier threat, is being used extensively on Team A again following the recovery from the leg injury of two weeks ago, but he is having difficulty in ousting substitute Murray Kenny completely, for Kenny has found his stride and is playing heads-up ball.

FOOTBALL FLASHES

By BILL GRIMES

Four years ago, the Elis suffered their first defeat at the hands of the Indians and they've been waking Mr. Bowl Jinx since that day.

And it's a foregone conclusion that Mr. Bowl Jinx will be resurrected tomorrow afternoon if Yale knocks Dartmouth out of the undefeated group.

Since resuming football relations in 1924, Dartmouth and Yale have played 14 games. And the "recap" shows that, although the Elis have won seven, tied four, and lost only three games, Dartmouth hasn't been beaten in the Bowl since 1934.

Jesse Hawley

When Dartmouth played its first game in the Yale Bowl, Jesse Hawley was head coach Hawley was recognized as one of the greatest offensive coaches ever connected with football. But, on four tries, Hawley never took a decision from Yale.

Hawley escorted two outstanding and two mediocre Big Green squads into the Yale Bowl between 1924 and 1928. Unfortunately, his best Dartmouth eleven (1925) didn't play the Elis. But, all that Jesse and Dartmouth can show for those four invasions is a 14-14 tie.

Then, Jack Cannell, who succeeded Hawley as head coach in 1929, spent five years trying, without success, to beat Yale. Under Cannell, Dartmouth bettered Hawley's record by one tie game, but also lost three decisions to the wearers of the blue.

GREEN UNLUCKY

Along about five years ago the Dartmouth players, undergraduates and even alumni, began to suspect that there must be something to that Bowl jinx. In nine games Dartmouth had lost six decisions and come up with three ties, but nary a victory.

So, Jack Cannell was turned loose and Earl Blaik was drafted from the Army. And Blaik kicked the jinx right out of the Bowl on his second visit to New Haven as head coach of the Indians of the North.

I have seen every game that Dartmouth and Yale have played in the Bowl. I didn't have a hand in the coining of the "Bowl Jinx" expression. Nor did I contribute to its existence. I was convinced that the Indians really were "Bowl shy."

As I see, Dartmouth should have beaten Yale on seven occasions since 1924, and the Elis should have been on the winning end five times, which, of course, leaves but two tie games.

To the Johnny-Come-Lately experts, Dartmouth didn't rate beating Yale until 1929. Don't you believe it. The Big Green was so much better than Yale in 1924 and 1926 that there was no comparison, until the results were posted.

The "Bowl Jinx" expression began to sweep across the country after "Hoot" Ellis intercepted a pass thrown by Tommy Longnecker in 1929. It was late in the fourth quarter when the Yale speed merchant made that now famous interception and the Big Green was leading, 12 to 9.

MADE LONGNECKER GOAT

In all probability, the "experts" didn't see Tommy slip and his knee hit the ground. And, apparently, the referee also missed that infraction of the rules. But, nevertheless, Tommy's knee DID hit the ground, and the play should have been stopped.

But there was no whistle, so Tommy made the pass. Then, to further complicate the situation, the Dartmouth end, who was to have received the pass, was blocked at the line of scrimmage, and Ellis grabbed the pigskin and raced some 80-odd yards for the winning touchdown.

But to get back to the '24 and '26 games. If any Dartmouth player is responsible for the Bowl jinx don't slight Eddie "Death" Dooley. On the Big Green's first appearance in the Bowl, "Death" Dooley muffed a punt which a Yale player scooped up and raced for a touchdown early in the opening quarter. And Dartmouth was trailing by seven points

Eddie Dooley

The Big Green came back and in the fourth quarter was leading, 14 to 7, but the Elis came up with another touchdown and the final score was 14 all.

If that 14-14 game was hard to take for Jesse Hawley, the 1926 tilt must have given him those stomach ulcers.

The Big Green was deadlocked with the Elis in the fourth period, 7-7. Bob McPhail threw a long diagonal pass to Jack McAvoy, who was all set to make the completion on the Yale 30 or 35-yard line on the Eli side of the Bowl.

McAVOY VICTIM OF FOUL

Just as McAvoy was about to turn to receive the pass, a young Yale back from Winthrop by the name of McGunigle serenely placed his right hand behind Mr. McAvoy's shoulders, pushed the Dartmouth receiver off the playing field, intercepted the pass and raced for the winning touchdown.

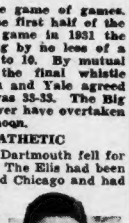
Do you still believe that the Bowl jinx was born in 1929?

In 1927 and '28, it was "no contest." Yale won both games under wraps. And, then, after "Hoot" Ellis' interception, Tom McCabe, who is now the athletic director at Holy Cross but that afternoon was the head linesman, saved Dartmouth by detecting Jordan, the Yale fullback, holding Phil Glazer, the Big Green's left tackle, at the start of Albie Booth's 70-odd-yard run for a touchdown. That 60-minute session wound up in a scoreless tie.

Then came the game of games. At the end of the first half of the Big Green-Blue game in 1931 the Elis were leading by no less of a margin than 33 to 10. By mutual consent, when the final whistle blew, Dartmouth and Yale agreed that the score was 33-33. The Big Green should never have overtaken Yale that afternoon.

GREEN SYMPATHETIC

The next year Dartmouth fell for the Yale weeps. The Elis had been tied by Bates and Chicago and had lost to Brown and Army prior to meeting the Big Green. Their reign was over, as they saw it, but when the game ended the score read, Yale 6, Dartmouth 0.



Clint Frank

On Jack Cannell's fifth and final Bowl invasion, a missed after touchdown point cost Dartmouth a tie and then Earl Blaik dropped a 7 to 2 verdict to the Elis in 1934, after which the Big Green buried the Bowl jinx by winning in '35, '36 and a year ago and tying in 1937.
